Smelter bill proposal stalled in Frankfort

Century chief willing to deal with Big Rivers

By Chuck Stinnett
cstinnett@thegleaner.com
270-831-8343

With a bill to lower Century Aluminum's electric rates stalled and possibly dead in Frankfort, Century's chief executive has told power supplier Big Rivers Electric Corp. he is willing to try to negotiate a deal to keep the 700-employee aluminum smelter at Hawesville in operation.

"To me it seems there absolutely must be a solution that works for each of us, i.e., is better than the alternative," Century CEO Mike Bless wrote in an email message to Big Rivers CEO Mark Bailey late Thursday. "We owe it to all of our various constituencies to find it.

"Let me please get back to you within the next day or two," Bless added. "I think it might indeed make sense for the two of us to participate directly."

The email message, which circulated among state legislators on Friday, was a reply to an earlier message by Bailey after a Century-sponsored bill stalled on the floor of the Kentucky House of Representatives.

Bill sponsor Rep. Tommy Thompson, D-Owensboro, pulled the bill from the House floor to prevent a vote Thursday night, saying too much misinformation surrounded the legislation, The Associated Press reported.

Later than night, Big Rivers' Bailey contacted the Century CEO by email.

"I understand the Kentucky House has encouraged us to negotiate an agreement," Bailey wrote to Bless. "Big Rivers shares that desire. We remain committed to reaching an agreement to permit Century to procure the Hawesville smelter's power from the (open) market."

Century has canceled its power supply contract with Big Rivers effective Aug. 20. To remain in operation, Century apparently will have to purchase a large amount of electricity on the open market and strike a deal to have Big Rivers and power distributor Kenergy Corp. deliver that power to the smelter.

Henderson touting 'work ready' certification

Signs soon to be erected

By Chuck Stinnett

270-831-8343

It's a sign of the times that employers need workers who are educated and have basic skills — and that the local community is committed to making improvements in those areas.

Soon, metal highway signs will go up around here showing that Henderson County is one of the first in Kentucky to meet specific standards in such matters and has been designated a "Certified Work Ready Community" by the state.

Henderson County is one of only five counties in Kentucky to qualify so far.

On Friday, the community was presented with four signs that are expected to be posted on major highways within the next month, touting that achievement.

"We want you to tell everybody whom comes through the community that you're 'Work Ready,' " said Tom West, executive director of the Kentucky Workforce Investment Board, which administers the program.

West was also scheduled to present "Work Ready Community in Progress" signs in Union County, which has met some but not all of the criteria for becoming certified.

"The No. 1 thing business and industry looks for is not tax breaks and infrastructure, like in the past," West said. "The No. 1 thing is talent.

Job gains cut unemployment to 4-year low

By Christopher S. Rugaber
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The American job market isn't just growing. It's accelerating.

Employers added 236,000 jobs in February and drove down the unemployment rate to 7.7 percent, its lowest level in more than four years. The gains signal that companies are confident enough in the economy to intensify hiring even in the face of tax increases and government spending cuts.

Last month capped a fourth-month hiring spree in which employers have added an average of 205,000 jobs a month. The hiring has been fueled by steady improvement in housing, auto sales, manufacturing and corporate profits, along with record-low borrowing rates.

Before the spree, employers added an average of 154,000 jobs from

"Zach will be working with key stakeholders such as financial institutions and area community service organizations to design safe, affordable and convenient transaction accounts as well as educate the public about the benefits of having a bank account and how they can access them," Peak said, noting that he will be sharing various ways to participate as a Bank on Henderson volunteer, from distributing information to conducting financial literacy training..

State pension reform deadlock continues

By Roger Alford
Associated Press

FRANKFORT – Gov. Steve Beshear concluded a private meeting Friday with a bipartisan group of legislative leaders without breaking an impasse on how to best bring about pension reform, though he said he's optimistic that continuing talks would be fruitful.

The Democratic-controlled House and Republican-led Senate have been at loggerheads on how to shore up the financially troubled pension plans for state and local government retirees.

"I thought we got off to a great start," Beshear said after the Friday meeting at the Governor's Mansion. "Everybody is sincere in wanting to work through these issues and come to some acceptable solution."

Democratic House Speaker Greg Stumbo called the meeting "a first step." And Republican Senate President Robert Stivers described "good dialogue" in the closed-door meeting.

"I start off being optimistic," Beshear told reporters. "You know, we may be up and down in that department over the next several days, but I'm encouraged by the attitude everybody has. I expect we will have a number of meetings over the next several days."

The Senate is proposing a 401(k)-like retirement plan for new employees — a move the House opposes. And the House wants to use money from the lottery and horse tracks to boost the state's yearly pension contribution. The Senate is balking at that idea.

Beshear said Friday other options also are being considered, though he didn't elaborate.

Beshear, a Democrat, has said he intends to call lawmakers back into special session if they can't agree this time around on a financial fix for the pension plans, which have a $33 billion unfunded liability.

Legislative leaders said they want to avoid a special session if at all possible. The Legislative Research Commission estimates the cost of a special session at $300,000 a week.

Judge-executive removed from office

The Associated Press

LEXINGTON – Knott County Judge-Executive Randy Thompson, who is serving a 40-month prison sentence for conspiring to buy votes, has been removed from office.

Floyd County Commonwealth's Attorney Brent Turner filed the request as special prosecutor to have Thompson removed. Turner told the Lexington Herald-Leader that Judge John David Caudill approved it after a hearing Friday.

Turner said he argued that the state Constitution prohibits convicted felons from holding office.

Thompson was convicted in 2008 of conspiring to buy votes in the November 2006 general election but remained free until December while appealing.

A federal appeals court refused in November to reconsider an order upholding his conviction, and Thompson reported to prison in Pennsylvania on Dec. 6. Fiscal court voted last month to end his salary.

Lost hikers rescued on Kentucky mountain

■ College students on spring break became disoriented on five-mile trail

By Dylan Lovan
Associated Press

WHITESBURG, Ky. – More than three dozen Pennsylvania college students spending spring break in Kentucky on a mission trip were safe Friday after becoming lost for hours when a sightseeing mountain hike unexpectedly stretched into the night, officials said Friday.

Rescuers were able to find them — hungry and cold — after an hours-long effort in rough terrain and freezing temperatures.

Most of the hikers were seen in the emergency room at Appalachian Regional Hospital in Whitesburg, with one woman admitted and listed in good condition, spokeswoman Dena Sparkman said Friday.

The few who declined to be seen at the hospital "were like, 'feed me and we're good,'" Sparkman said.

"I think the best medicine we gave them was chicken soup," Sparkman said.

The group was made up of 37 students and three staff members from La Salle University on an annual mission trip called Project Appalachia, said John Caroulis, spokesman for the Philadelphia school.

Caroulis said the group was helping build houses in Harlan, about a half-hour from Whitesburg, and had gone on a hiking trip that was made every year on the trip.

Rescuers said the group got disoriented when it got dark while they were hiking near Bad Branch Falls, an area on the Bad Branch Nature Preserve.

A search began about 7 p.m. EST Thursday, and it took until 3:30 a.m. Friday to get the entire group off the mountain, said Mayking Volunteer Fire Chief Tony Fugate, who helped.

Fugate said the group apparently hiked to a popular spot above the Bad Branch Falls waterfall, but it got dark and they couldn't find the trail back. When they got disoriented, they called 911 from their cellphones and were able to talk rescuers toward them.

They were on a five-mile trail shaped like a lollipop headed to an area called High Rock, which is known for its breathtaking views, according to Shad Baker, a local resident who created many of the public trails used in the area and helped guide rescuers via cell phone.

Asian carp fishing tourney next week

Special to The Gleaner

Twenty-one teams from Kentucky, Indiana and Tennessee have signed up for the country's first commercial fishing tournament for Asian carp.

The Carp Madness Tournament is being held at Kentucky and Barkley lakes in Western Kentucky this Tuesday and Wednesday.

"Our goal is simple: We want to purge 100 tons of carp from two of the state's best fishing lakes," said Ron Brooks, fisheries director for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

"Kentucky Afield" television host Tim Farmer will emcee the final tournament weigh-in at 7 p.m. Wednesday at the Kentucky Dam Marina ramp in Gilbertsville.

Kentucky Fish and Wildlife is offering $10,000 to the commercial fishing team that brings in the most poundage.

The department is dividing a total of $20,000 among the top five teams. Netting is the best way to capture Asian carp since they are plankton feeders and do not bite baited hooks.

Approximately 50 volunteers will help monitor the contest.

Spectators can see Asian carp filleting demonstrations and have their questions answered by fisheries biologists.

Although fishermen will likely be bringing fish in to weigh all day long, most will likely be brought in after 5 p.m.

Final weigh-ins are planned nightly at 7 p.m. at the Kentucky Dam Marina ramp, located at the Kentucky Dam Village State Resort Park.

"We want people to come to this event so they can see the problem we're dealing with in both of these lakes," Brooks said. "We think people will be amazed by the size and quantity of these fish."

Fish caught during the tournament will be placed in a refrigerated truck for transport to processing plants.

Asian carp have white meat without a strong fishy taste when properly prepared.

Department employees will be frying Asian carp at the marina ramp and will provide free samples for the public.

Asian carp include three species: the bighead carp, silver carp and black carp.

Asian carp spread throughout much of the Mississippi River basin after escaping from fish farms in the 1970s.

In Kentucky, these fish are found throughout most of the Ohio River, Kentucky River, Green River, Salt River and Rough River.

Kentucky and Barkley lakes also host large populations.

Asian carp are a threat to Kentucky's native species and because they feed on plankton. Plankton forms the base of the food chain, which many sport fish rely upon after hatching.

Expo center hosting rain garden workshop

Gleaner staff

A daylong workshop on constructing and maintaining a rain garden will be offered on April 8 at the Henderson County Cooperative Extension Expo Center.

A rain garden is a man-made landscape feature designed to capture and reduce stormwater runoff.

Stormwater runoff occurs when precipitation hits impervious surfaces, such as roofs, driveways or parking lots. As this water runs off the surface, it takes trash and pollutants with it on its way to local waterways or the sewer system. In many instances, stormwater runoff also results in soil erosion.

Specialists with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture are proactively addressing this issue by educating Kentuckians about stormwater and residential best management practices for stormwater, with a grant from the Southern Regional Water Program.

One way they are doing this is by presenting rain garden workshops. These workshops help communities meet two EPA control measures: public education and outreach and public participation. In 2012, specialists led 21 rain garden workshops at extension offices, 4-H camps and schools across the state.

"Ideally, individuals would build a rain garden on a well-drained area to catch runoff from their roofs or driveways," said Rick Durham, UK extension professor for consumer horticulture. "In this workshop, we also talk about plant selection and maintenance. We suggest using perennials to keep the garden low maintenance and native plants because they are well adapted to the area."

The workshop, which runs from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., will include a half day of classroom instruction as well as a hands-on demonstration and installation of a rain garden that will serve as a community demonstration site.

The workshops are open to the public but specifically target watershed coordinators, Soil and Water Conservation District staff, stormwater managers, school teachers, Master Gardeners and UK Cooperative Extension Service agents.

The cost is $15, which includes lunch. Registration is required and the deadline is April 4. You can register by calling 826-8387 or emailing jrport4@uky.edu.

The Extension Expo Center is located at 3341 Zion Road behind the Henderson County Extension Office.

In addition, specialists have developed a Web page that explains the essential components of a rain garden. It is available at http://www.ca.uky.edu/gogreen/raingarden.php.

Efforts to help East End appreciated

In a nearly four-year effort, some individuals have sought to bring a park to the East End for the many children there. Butch Puttman, Buzzy Newman and Robby Mills have spent countless hours trying to make this a reality.

Often there have been roadblocks, but the individuals held rank and pushed the well-being of the children as a paramount virtue. I was delighted to see the cooperation between the fiscal court and the city, and like all optimists I look at the empty lot and see swings and seesaws. I see kids who spend too much time at their computer games getting exercise and enjoying the out of doors.

There is much to be done still in the East End. Currently there are empty lots that the city must tend to keep the weeds down, the litter cleaned up and to remove the remnants of burned or abandoned houses from the lots. However, when they do cut weeds and clean up lots, they add the amount to the tax bills that are rarely paid. After all, who wants to pay taxes on a lot they cannot use?

The houses in the East End existed before zoning and still can exist as long as the structure is maintained. When a fire occurs or the house is condemned, the city gets another vacant lot that must be cared for with the city as the last resort.

I have a simple suggestion for the city and the zoning board. Why not give the lots that are not worth the tax bills to Habitat? When Mr. Fuller designed the Habitat program his emphasis was to build houses that fit neighborhoods throughout the world. Although the lots are small, there are designs that would fill the lots with charming structures.

Such housing would do much to stabilize the community, and they would be a much better alternative to chopping weeds each summer. It would take a variance, but it would add to city revenue instead of taking away from it.

Again, I would like to express my appreciation for the hard work Magistrate Puttman, City Commissioner Mills and Assistant City Manager Newman have done to make this dream a park.

Democrats stand in way of needed change

Two issues signify the brokenness of Kentucky politics better than any other: gambling and life. On Feb. 28, six bills that protected human life were killed. On Feb. 27, most state House Democrats voted for a bill that would potentially suck the life out of many more who made it out of the womb — expanded gambling.

This was their solution to shore up the faltering pension fund. So instead of making tough decisions and implementing recommendations from the bipartisan, bicameral legislative task force on pension reform, House Democrats apparently would rather fleece the public to pay for a problem they largely created and to do so in an unconstitutional way.

In odd-numbered years, it takes 60 votes to raise revenue. They only had 52. They also voted to expand gambling by statute instead of a constitutional amendment. The high-rollers in the House came up snake eyes and drew the ire of Senate President Robert Stivers (R-Manchester), who won't waste his time with future legislative task forces if nobody will follow their recommendations.

Eight Democrats on the Health and Welfare Committee, including Rep. David Watkins (D-Henderson), killed six pro-life bills. Two bills would have given women more information prior to an abortion.

The ultrasound bill required doctors who prematurely and purposely end the lives of unborn children to let their patients see the ultrasound of their yet-to-be-born child. It would have also required them to explain what they are seeing. The other bill closed a loophole that abortionists exploited to circumvent actually seeing their patients before performing an abortion. It required that they meet with women in person 24 hours before the abortion instead of playing a tape-recorded message. Four other life-related bills were voted down in the same committee.

The waning days of the legislative session have not been good for Kentucky, its women, its children or the Democratic Party.

Obama trying to bring U.S. to its knees

For four years President Obama and the majority of the Democrats complained about the mess Obama inherited from former President George W. Bush. Why in the world did he run for another term? He would inherit a mess 10 times worse his second term.

I believe he wants to finish his anti-American agenda by destroying the best health care system in the world and replacing it with socialist, communist Obamacare. Read Obamacare online and see for yourself.

I also believe he wants to put America on its knees economically and militarily by gutting the military, exorbitant gas prices and taxing the American people into oblivion. Sadly most Americans will unwittingly stand by and let it happen.

God bless America.

Republican plans would renew recession

The deficit is down 50 percent as a share of gross domestic product just since President Bush's fiscal year 2009 deficit and is falling at the fastest rate since the end of World War II.

Yet the Washington debate is about how and where to cut us back into recession. Why? GOP propaganda. Check the Congressional Budget Office.

All Republicans want to do is practice harmful austerity policies like Europe and then put America back in recession.

Leaders should consider shooting range

I would like to know why local government can plan for joggers, walkers, skateboarders, fishermen, cyclists and picnickers, but you ask about a shooting range and nobody will talk to you.

There are a great many gun owners in this city who would love to have some place to shoot legally. So what is so hard about putting in a range at the Sandy Watkins Park? The county is trying to accommodate everybody but the hunter and gun owners who enjoy shooting.

I know I have been trying to talk to Judge McCormick about this, but he does not answer my calls. I guess he doesn't work for the public or at least that is the way it seems when politicians refuse to answer your calls or questions.

A word to local government leaders, they represent the public so why don't they act like it?

Gremlin steals for both good and ill

Many elderly folks, like myself, have aches and pains — the only trouble I have is with my "live-in" gremlin. It may be he needs the stuff he takes from me or maybe just does it to torment me, but he does it on a regular basis.

What he wants my stuff for I don't know. The positive side is that he usually brings the stuff back — got through with it or got all the fun he wanted out of hiding it from me.

That may be the most important reason it is for us elderly folks to be retired, because it takes so much time hunting for stuff our gremlin hides from us.

And maybe that's why I don't have aches and pains — he takes them and hides them too. That kind of stuff he can keep. Way to go, Gremlin!

Recycling supporters know it makes a difference

By Susan Sauls
Special to The Gleaner

You may have noticed I include the question, "What do you think about all this," in each of my articles. I'm excited to say I've received responses not only from people in this area, but also from all the way south to Austin, Texas.

A Henderson reader told me his recyclables had not been picked up in several weeks so I encouraged him to call the company the city of Henderson contracts with to pick up curbside recyclables, Allied Waste in Evansville (812-424-3345) and let them know. He did just that and they came and hauled them away.

Another Hendersonian, Ruth, would like a recycle container with wheels so it would be easier for her to roll to the curb. She shared with me that some older folks find the recycle boxes we currently use difficult to maneuver. Henderson's mayor and commissioners are talking about revamping the curbside services and rolling carts are a consideration.

Thanks to thegleaner.com, Donna, formerly of Evansville and now living in Texas, follows what's going on back home. She told me her Texas neighborhood is in a pilot program for yard trimmings and compost recycling. Each household has received a large wheeled cart for yard trimmings and a small compost bucket to keep indoors for food scraps and soiled paper, which is emptied into a large bin on collection day. "Pretty nifty!" she wrote. I agree. it IS pretty nifty!

Providence resident Teresa says she's an "avid recycler" always looking for new ideas. She tosses her pumpkins over her fence into an area with a lot of overgrowth where they seed themselves and produce a new crop every year. She also saves her vegetable scraps and spreads them on her garden spot.

Is recycling a second nature to you? For some upcoming local recycling opportunities, mark these important dates on your calendar.

Saturday, April 20, is Household Hazardous Waste Day at the Henderson Recycling Center, and Henderson's Spring Clean-Up week will be April 22-26.

And let's not forget, it's that time of year to gather information for your tax preparer. On Friday, June 28, you'll be able to dispose of all those old unwanted, unneeded, sensitive paper documents at the Henderson Recycling Center. Piranha Mobile Shredding will shred and dispose of them for you. The service is free for up to 100 pounds of papers. (Helpful hint: Three copy paper boxes equal about 100 pounds.)

So, what do you REALLY think of all this? Please keep your comments, questions and ideas about reducing, reusing and recycling coming to me, ssauls@hendersonky.us.

Survey sees split on federal spending

By Tom Raum
Associated Press

WASHINGTON – As President Barack Obama and lawmakers spar over huge federal deficits, they're confronted by a classic contradiction: Most Americans want government austerity, a survey shows, but they also want increased spending on a host of popular programs: education, crime fighting, health care, Social Security, the environment and more. Less for defense, space and foreign aid.

The newly released General Social Survey asked people whether they believe spending in specific categories is "too much," "too little" or "about right." It covers the public's shifting priorities from 1973, when Richard Nixon was president, through 2012 with Obama in the White House.

"Despite a dislike of taxes, more people have always favored increases in spending than cuts," wrote the survey's director, Tom W. Smith, of the independent research organization NORC at the University of Chicago.

While people's priorities shift over the years, they've not changed on one category. Foreign aid has been stuck firmly in last place since the survey began. Last year, 65 percent of those surveyed thought there was "too much," 25 percent checked "about right" and a slim 11 percent said "too little." The numbers are not much changed from 1973 — when 73 percent said too much on foreign aid, 22 percent just right and 5 percent too little.

Sulaiman Abu Ghaith, Osama bin Laden's son-in-law and spokesman, would be the highest-ranking al-Qaida figure to stand trial on U.S. soil since 9/11. But officials say it's unlikely he will have few details about ongoing threats.

Bin Laden's son-in-law enters not guilty plea

By Lara Jakes
Associated Press

WASHINGTON – Sulaiman Abu Ghaith, the charismatic al-Qaida spokesman, fundraiser and son-in-law to Osama bin Laden, is likely to have a vast trove of knowledge about the terror network's central command but not much useful information about current threats or plots, intelligence officials and other experts say.

Abu Ghaith pleaded not guilty Friday to conspiring to kill Americans in propaganda videos that warned of further assaults against the United States as devastating as the Sept. 11 attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon that killed nearly 3,000 people.

Believed to be more of a strategic player in bin Laden's inner circle than an operational plotter, Abu Ghaith would be the highest-ranking al-Qaida figure to stand trial on U.S. soil since 9/11. Intelligence officials say he may be able to shed new light on al-Qaida's inner workings — concerning al-Qaida's murky dealings in Iran over the past decade, for example — but probably will have few details about specific or imminent ongoing threats.

He gave U.S. officials a 22-page statement after his Feb. 28 arrest in Jordan, according to prosecutors. They would not describe the statement.

Bearded and balding, Abu Ghaith said little during the 15-minute hearing in U.S. District Court in New York — in lower Manhattan just blocks from ground zero — and displayed none of the finger wagging or strident orations that marked his propaganda in the days and months after 9/11.

Through an interpreter, Judge Lewis A. Kaplan asked whether he understood his rights. Abu Ghaith nodded and said, "Yes." Asked whether he had money to hire an attorney, he shook his head and said no. He nodded and said yes when asked whether he had signed an affidavit describing his financial situation.

Kaplan promised to set a trial date when the case returns to court April 8. Bail was not requested, and none was set. Abu Ghaith's lawyer declined to comment after the hearing.

The fact that the defendant is being tried in federal district court is controversial in itself. Republicans are criticizing the Obama administration for bringing Abu Ghaith to New York instead of sending him to the military detention center at Guantánamo Bay, Cuba.

Hagel makes first trip to Afghanistan

Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel arrived in Afghanistan on Friday for his first visit as Pentagon chief, saying that there are plenty of challenges ahead as NATO hands over the country's security to the Afghans.

"We are still at war," Hagel said, warning the U.S. and its allies to remain focused on the mission while noting that the U.S. never intended to stay in Afghanistan indefinitely.

He said it was vital to remember why the U.S. invaded Afghanistan in the days after the 9/11 attacks, including the need to rid the country of terrorists and a hostile government.

On the day of Hagel's arrival, there was a fresh reminder of the conflict. Defense officials said three men wearing Afghan army uniforms and driving an Afghan army vehicle forced their way onto a U.S. base in eastern Afghanistan at midday and opened fire, killing one civilian contractor and wounding other U.S. troops.

MASSACHUSETTS

Storm surprises with lots of snow

WHITMAN – The late-winter storm that buried parts of the country was forecast to be little more than a nuisance for most of New England. Try telling that to Connecticut and Massachusetts residents who spent two days shoveling as much as 2 feet snow.

The storm was centered far out in the Atlantic Ocean, and by the time it reached New England, forecasters were focused on the potential for coastal flooding and not snow, which in many places was predicted to reach a maximum of 6 or 8 inches.

The coastline was battered by three high tides during the duration of the storm, the worst Friday morning, when some roads in coastal towns were flooded with up to 3 feet of water.

But in most places, it was the persistent snow that threw people for a loop.

The National Weather Service reported nearly 13 inches of snow at Boston's Logan International Airport as of 1 p.m., with more than 2 feet in a few Massachusetts towns and nearly that much in many others. Some parts of Connecticut and New Hampshire also saw more than a foot.

COLORADO

Shooting suspect was hospitalized

DENVER – Colorado theater shooting suspect James Holmes was taken from jail to the psychiatric ward of a hospital in November because he was considered a danger to himself, and he was frequently held in restraints while hospitalized, according to a court document released Friday.

The document said Holmes was taken to Denver Health Medical Center on Nov. 15 because he was "in immediate need of a psychiatric evaluation" and was held there for several days.

The document provided the first public confirmation of another incident in which Holmes was hospitalized for "potential self-inflicted head injuries in his cell." It did not say when that incident occurred.

The revelations heighten expectations that Holmes would plead not guilty by reason of insanity Tuesday, his next scheduled court appearance.

EGYPT

Police strikes spread, add turmoil

CAIRO – After months of battling with angry young protesters, many in Egypt's police forces say they have had enough.

Strikes and protests spread around the country Friday by police units frustrated with being blamed for deadly crackdowns on protesters and accusing Islamist President Mohammed Morsi of using them to fight his enemies. In at least 10 of the country's 29 provinces, some units sealed their stations with chains, some calling for the removal of their boss, the interior minister, appointed by Morsi.

In past days, angry riot police locked their top commander in their camp for hours. Others refused to be deployed in clashes with street protesters in Nile Delta cities. Police disobeyed orders to secure Morsi's motorcade route from his palace to his home in eastern Cairo, to guard his family home in the Delta, or to guard the headquarters of his Muslim Brotherhood in the capital.

KENYA

Presidential hopeful near 50%

NAIROBI – The leading candidate in Kenya's presidential election, Uhuru Kenyatta, saw his percentage of the vote yo-yo just below the 50 percent mark early Saturday, a race too tight to call with only a few votes outstanding.

The election commission said just after midnight that it would announce final results at 11 a.m. Kenya time, an announcement that ended any concerns of overnight violence by supporters of a losing candidate.

A win by Kenyatta could greatly affect Kenya's relations with the West because the candidate faces charges at the International Criminal Court in an alleged role in directing some of Kenya's 2007 postelection violence. The U.S. and other nations may scale back ties to the East African nation if he becomes president.

The last tally posted early Saturday showed Kenyatta, the deputy prime minister, with 49.71 percent of the vote with 98 percent of locations — 285 of 291 — tabulated. Kenyatta had bounced as high as 51 percent Friday night as the election commission updated returns.

ISRAEL

Palestinians are dispersed at key site

JERUSALEM – Israeli police have entered Jerusalem's holiest site to disperse hundreds of Palestinians who were throwing rocks.

Police spokesman Micky Rosenfeld said Palestinian worshippers rioted after Friday Muslim prayers at the hilltop site in the Old City of Jerusalem. It's known to Jews as the Temple Mount and to Muslims as the Noble Sanctuary, where the Al-Aqsa Mosque stands.

Rosenfeld said police dispersed the crowd with stun grenades. He said several officers were slightly injured by masked Palestinians who threw rocks and two firebombs, but police did not enter the mosque.

The contested site, where the Al-Aqsa Mosque compound is built above the ruins of the biblical Jewish Temples, is one of the region's most sensitive. Israeli steps to quell Palestinian disturbances there have led to full-blown riots in the past.

Fiery funeral for Venezuela's Chavez

By Jorge Rueda
Associated Press

CARACAS, Venezuela – Hugo Chavez was lauded as a modern-day reincarnation of Latin American liberator Simon Bolivar at a fiery, foot-stomping state funeral Friday, hours before his handpicked successor was sworn in as acting president over the fierce objections of the opposition.

Nicolas Maduro took the oath of office in the National Assembly before ruling party legislators, dignitaries and a boisterous crowd of sympathizers. Holding up a tiny blue-bound booklet of Venezuela's 1999 constitution in his right hand, Maduro pledged his "most absolute loyalty" to Chavez.

Maduro also claimed the allegiance of Venezuela's army, calling it "the armed forces of Chavez" as he pumped his fist in the air, a gesture that was reciprocated by the defense minister watching from the gallery. Critics have voiced increasing concern about the overt support the military has shown to the ruling party since Chavez's death despite a ban on the army's participation in politics.

The opposition largely boycotted the swearing-in, calling it unconstitutional. Henrique Capriles, Maduro's likely opponent in presidential election that must be called within 30 days, spoke condescendingly, accusing him of "shamelessly" lying to the country.

At Chavez's state funeral earlier in the day, Maduro stood before an assemblage of presidents, princes and left-wing glitterati, speaking in a booming voice over the flag-draped casket in a ceremony that at times smacked of a political rally.

In the funeral hall, more than 30 political leaders including Cuba's Raul Castro and Iran's Mahmoud Ahmadinejad stood at attention before Chavez's flag-draped coffin.

Cardinals set to start conclave Tuesday

By Nicole Winfield
Associated Press

VATICAN CITY – Cardinals have set Tuesday as the start date for the conclave to elect the next pope, a milestone in this unusual papal transition and an indication that even without an obvious front-runner, the cardinals have a fairly good idea of who best among them can lead.

The conclave date was set Friday afternoon during a vote by the College of Cardinals, who have been meeting all week to discuss the church's priorities and the qualities a new pope must possess.

Tuesday will begin with a Mass in St. Peter's Basilica, followed by a procession into the Sistine Chapel and the first round of secret balloting in the afternoon.

Only one vote is held the first afternoon. If black smoke is sent snaking out of the chapel chimney to indicate there is no victor, the cardinals will retire for the day.

They will return Wednesday for two rounds of balloting in the morning, two rounds in the afternoon until a pope has been chosen.

In the past 100 years, no conclave has lasted longer than five days.

That said, there doesn't appear to be a front-runner in this election for a successor to the retired Benedict XVI, and the past week of deliberations has exposed sharp divisions among cardinals about some of the pressing problems facing the church.

U.S. Cardinal Timothy Dolan, considered a papal contender, said in a blog post Friday that most of the discussions in the meetings covered preaching and teaching the faith, tending to schools and hospitals, supporting priests "and getting more of them!"

The Americans had been pressing for more time to get to the bottom of the level of dysfunction and corruption in the Holy See's governance that was exposed by the leaks of papal documents last year.

But by Thursday afternoon, Cardinal Roger Mahony of Los Angeles tweeted that the discussions were "reaching a conclusion" and that a mood of "excitement" was taking hold.

Vatican-based cardinals had been angling for a speedy end to the discussions, perhaps to limit the amount of dirty laundry being aired.

A Tuesday start date could be read as something of a compromise. Monday had been seen as an obvious choice to start the conclave to ensure a pope would be elected and installed by Sunday, March 17, the last Sunday before Holy Week begins.

Do more women need diabetes care when pregnant?

By Lauran Neergaard
AP medical writer

WASHINGTON – A change in testing could nearly triple the number of women diagnosed with diabete s during pregnancy, but would catching milder cases help mother or baby? A government panel is urging more research to find that out before doctors make the switch.

Gestational diabetes — the kind that strikes during pregnancy — is a growing problem. More women are getting it as they wait until their 30s or later to have a baby, and as they increasingly begin their pregnancies already overweight.

This is one of the most common complications of pregnancy, and just about every woman gets checked for it. That's because if mom's high blood sugar isn't controlled, the fetus can grow too large, leading to C-sections and early deliveries.

There are other problems, too: Mom can get dangerous high blood pressure; the baby can be born with low blood sugar; the baby's risk of obesity in childhood is increased. And while this kind of diabetes usually disappears when the baby's born, the mother is left with another risk. Months or years later, half of women who had it wind up developing full-fledged Type 2 diabetes.

Doctors today diagnose gestational diabetes in about 5 percent to 6 percent of U.S. pregnancies, or about 240,000 a year, according to experts convened this week by the National Institutes of Health.

Most U.S. doctors use a two-step testing method. But now there's a push for doctors to switch to a simpler one-step test that's used in other parts of the world.

The one-step approach, backed by the American Diabetes Association and World Health Organization, isn't just about the convenience of getting diagnosed in one doctor visit or two.

It also would lower the blood sugar threshold for diagnosing the condition.

.On Wednesday, the NIH-appointed panel agreed, and said many more pregnant women would be classified with gestational diabetes — 15 to 20 percent — if doctors widely adopted the one-step approach.

The more aggressive approach treats milder cases with diet and exercise, not medication. But that's still a lot of women who would get extra medical care, such as nutritionist visits and doctor checks of their blood sugar and their baby's growth, not to mention uncertainty about whether C-sections would increase. That could add up to hundreds of millions of dollars in health costs annually.

But there's been no study of whether treating cases milder than are diagnosed today makes any difference to the health of mother and baby, the experts concluded.

"If we can extend benefits to mothers, their unborn children ... and impact their future health care, everybody would want to get on board even if it were more expensive," said Dr. Peter VanDorsten of the Medical University of South Carolina. He chaired the NIH panel. Doctors aren't required to follow its advice.

He called for quick research to settle the debate, saying, "We absolutely left the door ajar for reconsideration."

What's the test? Under the two-step method, nearly every woman drinks a super-sweet liquid, and has a blood test an hour later to see how the body processes the sugar.

Those who fail repeat the test with a larger drink and three hours of blood tests. With the one-step method, everyone would get a single two-hour test.

The push to switch came after a study of 25,000 pregnant women in nine countries.

It found that various health risks for mother and child gradually grew as mom's blood sugar rose above normal levels, even if she wasn't officially diabetic.

Dough for doughnuts

■ Cash can bribe dieters to lose weight, study finds

By Marilynn Marchione
AP chief medical writer

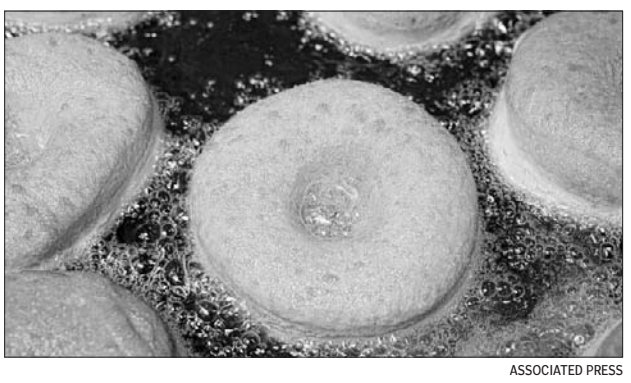

Willpower apparently can be bought. The chance to win or lose $20 a month enticed dieters in a yearlong study to drop an average of 9 pounds — four times more weight than others who weren't offered dough to pass up doughnuts.

Many employers, insurers and Internet programs dangle dollars to try to change bad habits like smoking or not exercising, but most studies have found this doesn't work very well or for very long.

The new study, done with Mayo Clinic employees, was the longest test yet of financial incentives for weight loss. Doctors think it succeeded because it had a mix of carrots and sticks — penalties for not losing weight, multiple ways to earn cash for succeeding, and a chance to recoup lost money if you fell off the "diet wagon" and later repented.

Incentives are "not like training wheels where people learn healthy habits and then will continue them on their own" — you have to keep them up for them to work, said one study leader, Dr. Steve Driver of Mayo in Rochester, Minn.

And if you're looking to set up a system like this at work or among friends, the key is to make it self-sustaining, Driver said. The Mayo one did that by having people who didn't lose weight put penalties into a fund that paid rewards to those who did.

Willpower apparently can be bought. The chance to win or lose $20 a month enticed people in a yearlong study to drop an average of nine pounds - four times more weight than others who were not offered dough to pass up the doughnuts.

It's also a good idea to make people pony up in advance. One woman flew into a tizzy when she stepped on a scale at a weigh-in and was told she'd have to pay.

"She headed for the door" but later came back and paid, Driver said. "People in Minnesota are pretty honest."

Driver will discuss the study this weekend at an American College of Cardiology conference in San Francisco. The group released results Thursday. Mayo paid for the study and Driver owns stock in Gympact, a company with an Internet program that gives financial incentives for exercising.

The diet study involved 100 obese employees at Mayo Clinic but was not a workplace wellness program. Half were given weight-loss counseling, monthly weigh-ins and a three-month gym membership. The others had those things plus financial incentives.

The aim was to lose 4 pounds a month up to a goal that depended on their starting weight. If they failed, they paid $20 into a kitty. If they succeeded, they got a voucher to collect $20 when the study ended. Part of the kitty was used to pay the rewards. The rest was put into a lottery that anyone could win, whether they had made their weight-loss goals or not.

Participants in the financial incentives group also earned $10 a month and lottery "tickets" for coming to monthly weigh-ins and texting their weights to study leaders each week, said Dr. Don Hensrud, preventive medicine chief at Mayo. So people could have lost as much as $240 or won as much as $360, plus what built up in the lottery fund.

After a year, 27 of the 50 financial incentive participants came out ahead moneywise. About 62 percent of them completed the study versus 26 percent of the other group. The incentives group lost a little more than 9 pounds on average, compared to 2.3 pounds for the others.

The results are promising, but people may need to lose more than 9 pounds to make a big difference in health, said Dr. Kevin Volpp, director of the University of Pennsylvania's Center for Health Incentives and Behavioral Economics.

Superbug reports alarming officials

NEW YORK – Health officials are reporting an alarming increase in some dangerous superbugs at U.S. hospitals.

These superbugs from a common germ family have become extremely resistant to treatment with antibiotics.

Infections from these superbugs are still uncommon. But in the first six months of last year, nearly 200 U.S. hospitals — about 4 percent — saw at least one case, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevent reported Tuesday.

Health officials call them "nightmare bacteria" that have now been seen in 42 states and threaten to spread their resistance to more and more of their bacterial brethren.

The report did not include better-known superbugs like the staph infection MRSA or the intestinal bug known as C-diff, which have plagued hospitals.

It focused on the superbugs that have emerged from one specific bacteria group. Some of those bacteria seem to have terrifying potential. Among them: Klebsiella pneumoniae and those made resistant by a gene called NDM-1, named for New Delhi.

New TSA policy on knives, bats sparks backlash

By Joan Lowy
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Flight attendants, pilots, federal air marshals and even insurance companies are part of a growing backlash to the Transportation Security Administration's new policy allowing passengers to carry small knives and sports equipment like souvenir baseball bats and golf clubs onto planes.

The Flight Attendants Union Coalition, representing nearly 90,000 flight attendants, said it is coordinating a nationwide legislative and public education campaign to reverse the policy announced by TSA Administrator John Pistole this week. A petition posted by the flight attendants on the White House's "We the People" website had nearly 10,400 signatures early Friday urging the administration to tell the TSA to keep knives off planes.

"Our nation's aviation system is the safest in the world thanks to multilayered security measures that include prohibition on many items that could pose a threat to the integrity of the aircraft cabin," the coalition, which is made up of five unions, said in a statement. "The continued ban on dangerous objects is an integral layer in aviation security and must remain in place."

Jon Adler, national president of the Federal Law Enforcement Officers Association, whose 26,000 members include federal air marshals, complained that he and other "stakeholders" weren't consulted by TSA before the "countersafety policy" was announced. He said the association will ask Congress to block the policy change.

The Coalition of Airline Pilot Associations, which represents 22,000 pilots, said it opposes allowing knives of any kind in airliner cabins.

"We believe the (terrorism) threat is still real and the removal of any layer of security will put crewmembers and the flying public unnecessarily in harm's way," Mike Karn, the coalition's president, said.

The new policy, which goes into effect on April 25, permits folding knives with blades that are 2.36 inches or less in length and are less than 1/2-inch wide. The policy is aimed at allowing passengers to carry pen knives, corkscrews with small blades and other small knives.

Passengers also will be allowed to include in their carry-on luggage novelty-sized baseball bats less than 24 inches long, toy plastic bats, billiard cues, ski poles, hockey sticks, lacrosse sticks and two golf clubs. Items like box cutters and razor blades are still prohibited.

There has been a gradual easing of some of the security measures applied to airline passengers after the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks. The new policy conforms U.S. security standards to international standards and allows the TSA to concentrate its energies on more serious safety threats, the agency said when it announced the change this week.

The policy change was based on a recommendation from an internal TSA working group, which decided the items represented no real danger, the agency said.

A TSA spokesman said the presence on flights of gun-carrying pilots traveling as passengers, federal air marshals and airline crew members trained in self-defense provide additional layers of security to protect against misuse of the newly allowed items.

Not all flights, however, have federal air marshals or armed pilots onboard.

NEW YORK

Fish fails to spark McDonald's sales

McDonald's new Fish McBites failed to hook enough diners to get the fast-food chain's U.S. sales growing in February.

The world's biggest hamburger chain said Friday that a key sales figure was down 3.3 percent in the U.S. for the month. When excluding the extra day of sales for February of last year, which was a leap year, the company said the figure was flat. That was despite the rollout of the Fish McBites nuggets in three sizes, which were also offered as the first new Happy Meal entree in a decade.

FREEPORT, MAINE

L.L. Bean profits at pre-recession levels

L.L. Bean's profits returned to pre-recession levels and the company's performance earned workers a healthy bonus approved Friday, but the retailer would have seen stronger performance if the president and Congress would reach an agreement on the federal budget, the company's CEO said.

The privately held company said its revenue grew only half of a percentage point, but profits showed greater growth thanks to productivity gains. The profit increase was enough to warrant a bonus of 7.5 percent of annual wages, which was approved at Friday's board meeting.

CEO Chris McCormick called the company's performance "outstanding" despite an anemic economy, but said it could have been even better with some help from Congress.

WASHINGTON

Wholesale stockpiles rise 1.2 percent

U.S. wholesalers boosted their stockpiles in January by the largest amount in 13 months even though their sales dropped sharply.

Inventories at the wholesale level rose 1.2 percent in January compared with December when inventories had edged up a slight 0.1 percent, the Commerce Department said Friday.

It was the biggest gain since a similar increase in December 2011.

NEW YORK

Google cutting 1,200 more Motorola jobs

Google is cutting an additional 1,200 jobs in its Motorola division as the cellphone maker struggles to compete.

Last summer, Google Inc. announced 4,000 Motorola job cuts. The latest reductions are in addition to those and will be in countries including the U.S., China and India.

"These cuts are a continuation of the reductions we announced last summer," Google spokeswoman Niki Fenwick said in an email.

WHAT DOES THE BIBLE SAY: By Gary Puryear

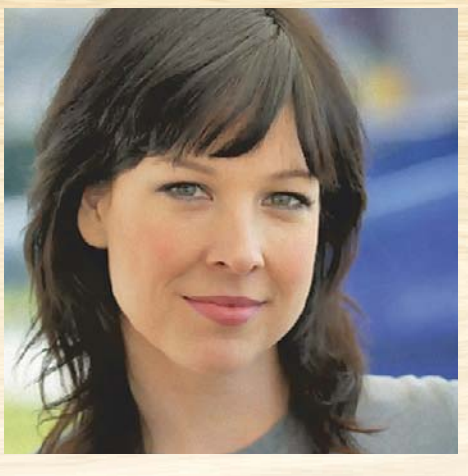

"FOR YOUR OWN GOOD"

Do you remember when you were told to take your medicine, accept your punishment, be restricted from certain activities-all in the name of "It is for your own good"? At the time we may not have been so receptive to such counsel but later we came to understand it was for our best. I noted recently while reading the book of Deuteronomy that Moses reminded the children of Israel that God's commands were for their own good (10:13). The Israelites were preparing for their entrance into the land of Canaan and the younger generation that had survived the wilderness or who had been born during the wilderness years are being given final instructions for their life of service to God. Many reject God's word today because they see no benefit in following its instructions. Sadly, our world is suffering the consequences of rejecting God's word. Families come apart, prisons are filled, lives are shattered, and empires crumble because of a refusal to heed God's message. God loves us so much that He has given us the necessary directions for life to give us a whole and complete life (John 10:10). Yes, I know that there are some struggles that inevitably come in life but many of the things we or others suffer are directly related to disobedience. The Lord gave a perfect illustration of such in (Luke 15:11-32). The younger son thought he knew better than his father so he went away and wasted his inheritance, suffering loneliness, hunger and despair. It was when he came to himself and returned to the father with an humble and penitent heart that he once again enjoyed the blessings of his father's house. God's wants what is best for us. Obedience to His will provides the best life here and a perfect home forever. God's word is "For our own good!"

BIG RIVERS

"The caveat is we cannot ask our customer-owners to assume extra risks and extra costs beyond what they would face if the Hawesville smelter ceased operation," Bailey wrote. "We realize there is discomfort on both parties' part with risks and costs, that's why we believe there must be some mechanism to address these two issues as they arise because there are still unknowns how this situation will be handled by MISO," the Midwest Independent Transmission System Operator, which manages the region's electric transmission network.

"If you or your negotiating team has any ideas how to address these issues we remain open to meeting at any time to try to work towards agreement," Bailey added. "If you believe your and my presence will help, I am willing to join as well."

Big Rivers has said it previously sought to negotiate such an agreement directly with Century.

But the aluminum company in January pushed instead for a change in state law, granting it the right to buy power from whoever it chose. The bill later changed into a proposal to lower Century's electric rate.

While Century supporters, including Thompson and several other state legislators, sought passage of the bill, Gov. Steve Beshear and some other legislators opposed it.

Beshear criticized it as a political solution to what should be a private contract negotiation. Legislators such as Rep. Jeff Greer, D-Brandenburg, questioned whether it would set a precedent for other large electric consumers, leading to deregulation of the state's electric industry.

The bill, if passed, would have also applied to Rio Tinto Alcan's 480-employee Sebree aluminum smelter. Following the Century decision to cancel its contract, Alcan served notice that it will stop buying power from Big Rivers starting Jan. 31, 2014.

However, Alcan stayed neutral during the tussle in Frankfort.

"We don't have anything to do with the legislation, so we're waiting to see what happens," Alcan plant spokesman said in phone message Thursday night.

The pending departure of Century prompted Big Rivers to apply to state regulators' in January for permission to raise its electric rates to other customers by $74.5 million per year, which would cost rural electric customers here an extra $24 per month, according to Kenergy President and CEO Greg Starheim.

The subsequent contract cancellation by Alcan will require another rate hike request that Bailey said would bring the total increase in rates to as much as $110 million.

In the meantime, Big Rivers said it is willing to help Century — and presumably Alcan — to import power from outside sources, provided it doesn't result in even greater expenses for Big Rivers' remaining 112,000 customers.

"We've just go to make it fair and balanced to all customers, not just (the) two (smelters)," Big Rivers spokesman Marty Littrel said.

A message indicated a Century spokesman was out of the office Friday, and thus unavailable to comment.

SIGNS

"If you don't have talent," he said, "you can't compete no matter how good your tax rates and roads and sewers are."

"It's a really exciting time for this community," Doug Bell, chairman of the Northwest Kentucky Forward regional economic development organization, said at a brief ceremony Friday morning.

"It's not only an economic development tool, but it's good for Henderson and Henderson County and the citizens of Henderson County, and it shows that employers are working to better the citizens of Henderson County," declared Karen Cecil, the human resources manager at the Rio Tinto Alcan's 480-employee Sebree aluminum smelter and the chair of the seven-county Green River Workforce Investment Board.

The Work Ready certification is presented to counties that meet certain educational, workforce development and community collaboration goals.

For example, a community must demonstrate that it has a high school graduation rate of more than 82.32 percent; that 25 percent or more of working-age adults hold at least a two-year college degree; that broadband Internet service is available; and that local economic development personnel, elected officials, business and industry representatives, educators and workforce development personnel have agreed to work together on workforce readiness.

A community must also demonstrate that at least 9 percent of local workers hold a National Career Readiness Certificate based on three WorkKeys assessments for reading, math and locating information. WorkKeys is overseen by the ACT college entrance exam service, and tests are offered at Henderson Community College.

"Rio Tinto fully supports this," Cecil said. "We require WorkKeys of all employees. It's been one of our requirements for eight or nine years."

To retain the Work Ready certification, counties must show improvement in various categories in the coming years.

In addition to Henderson County, Work Ready certification has been achieved in Daviess, Warren, Woodford and Boyle counties so far.

Fourteen other counties are "in progress," including Union, Hopkins, Christian and Hancock counties in this region.

Webster and McLean counties are among a host of other counties that are in the processing applying.

"So this part of Kentucky is doing really well," West said.

Time running out on state lawmakers

By Ben Finley

FRANKFORT — With time running short, several key bills, including one to increase Kentucky's high school dropout age to 18, still were pending in the Legislature Friday.

The odds grow longer with each passing day as lawmakers and the governor negotiate.

Gov. Steve Beshear told reporters Friday that he hopes compromise legislation on the dropout bill will become law in time.

He said a bipartisan proposal is being crafted that would allow school boards to vote on increasing the age in their districts. After 55 percent of school districts raise the age, the remaining districts will have to follow suit during the next four years.

The House bill originally called for statewide participation while the Senate proposal allowed school district discretion.

Four days remain in this year's legislative session. Two are on Monday and Tuesday. An eight-day break will follow during which lawmakers will continue to negotiate before they meet again for the final two days of the session, which are March 25 and 26.

"I think we're all committed to just seeing how far we can get, what we can put together and whether we can get the votes to pass it," Beshear said.

The governor could call a special session to try to pass failed bills.

The list of unfinished business includes conflicting proposals from the House and the Senate to reform the state's unfunded pensions for government employees. The governor said he's working with lawmakers to craft a solution.

Redistricting is another contested issue. The Democratic-led House passed a bill that would redraw its members' districts, forcing some Republican incumbents to run against each other in the next election. The bill is awaiting action in the Republican-led Senate. Senate leaders have said they're unlikely to approve of the House map without submitting their own redistricting proposal, which so far hasn't officially been proposed.

A bill that would open the door to industrial hemp farming in Kentucky has cleared the Senate and a House committee. But House Speaker Greg Stumbo has said he doubts the bill will make it to the floor for a vote because he said it has a lot of problems.

Senate President Robert Stivers told reporters late Thursday night: "We want to try to figure out what we can deal with in the few days we have left and then go forward and try to resolve those issues."

JOBS
from 1A

July through October and only 108,000 from April through June.

"The recovery is gathering momentum," Paul Ashworth, an economist at Capital Economics, said in a note to clients.

The gains could boost consumer spending, adding momentum to the U.S. recovery and helping troubled economies in Europe and Asia.

The U.S. economy is forecast to grow a modest 2 percent this year. Growth will likely be held back by uncertainty about the federal budget, higher Social Security taxes and across-the-board government spending cuts that kicked in March 1. And unemployment remains high nearly four years after the end of the Great Recession. Roughly 12 million people remain out of work.

The unemployment rate declined in February from 7.9 percent in January mostly because more people found work. Another factor was that 130,000 people without jobs stopped looking for work last month. The government doesn't count them as unemployed.

The last time unemployment was lower was December 2008, when it was 7.3 percent.

The unemployment rate is calculated from a survey of households. The number of jobs gained is derived from a separate survey of employers.

Hiring would be rising even faster if governments weren't shrinking their workforces, as they have been for nearly four years. Governments cut 10,000 jobs in February.

Some $44 billion in spending cuts kicked in last week after Congress failed to reach a budget deal. The cuts are expected to shave about a half-point from economic growth this year and lower total hiring by about 30,000 jobs a month from April through September, according to Moody's Analytics.

And most workers have had to absorb higher Social Security taxes this year. Someone earning $50,000 has about $1,000 less to spend in 2013. A household with two high-paid workers has up to $4,500 less.

Stock prices rose after the report was released and strengthened later in the day. The Dow Jones industrial average rose 67 points to 14,397, its fourth straight record close.

Robust auto sales and a steady housing recovery are spurring more hiring, which will trigger more consumer spending and could lead to stronger economic growth. The construction industry added 48,000 jobs in February; it's added 151,000 since September. Manufacturing gained 14,000 jobs last month and 39,000 since November.

Among industry categories, the biggest job growth in February was in professional and business services, which added 73,000. This category includes higher-paying jobs in accounting, engineering and information technology as well as temporary positions that typically pay less.

Retailers added 24,000 jobs. Education and health services gained 24,000. And the information industry, which includes publishing, telecommunications and film, added 20,000, mostly in the movie industry.

The economy is generating more higher-paying jobs. That trend is raising average pay, which will help offset the hit that Americans took from higher Social Security taxes and gas prices.

Hourly wages rose 4 cents to $23.82 last month. Wages have risen 2.1 percent over the past year, slightly ahead of inflation. Higher pay is vital to the economy because consumer spending drives 70 percent of economic activity.

Friday's jobs report isn't expected to move up the Fed's timetable for any rate increase.

The brighter hiring picture has yet to cause a flood of out-of-work people who aren't looking for a job to start seeking one. The proportion of Americans either working or looking for work dipped one-tenth of a percentage point in February to 63.5 percent, matching a 30-year low.

Even though the recession officially ended in June 2009, many Americans have remained discouraged about their job prospects and have given up looking. Others have returned to, or stayed in, school. And the vast generation of baby boomers has begun to retire; the oldest are now 67. Their exodus reduces the percentage of adults working or looking for work.

The pickup in hiring hasn't yet benefited the long-term unemployed. Nearly 4.8 million Americans have been out of work for six months or longer, nearly 100,000 more than in January.

Further strong hiring gains will hinge, in part, on healthy consumer spending. So far, higher gas prices and a Jan. 1 increase in Social Security taxes haven't caused Americans to sharply cut back on spending. But if the economy can continue to add 200,000 or more jobs a month, it means that many more people will have disposable income to spend.

It's gut check time again for Cats

Struggling Kentucky will host the Gators in 'one-game season'

By Gary Graves

LEXINGTON — Kentucky has been knocked on its heels again after two straight road losses, a major blow to the defending national champion's postseason hopes.

It's time for another gut check — or for this team, a series of gut checks.

"It's a one-game season, and it will be every game we play from here on out," Kentucky coach John Calipari said Friday. "Are you going to fight like heck, play through the ups and downs of a game, or are you going to die? I can't put it any more plainly or bluntly.

"You don't know what's going to happen until the game starts with this crew."

The Bluegrass Nation won't have to wait long to find out.

The Wildcats host No. 11 Florida Saturday in their Southeastern Conference finale. The showdown loomed large before the setbacks, including Thursday's 72-62 loss at Georgia. Now, while Kentucky (20-10, 11-6) desperately needs a win, beating the SEC regular season champion Gators (24-5, 14-3) will be tough unless the Wildcats turn things around in a hurry.

Florida drilled Kentucky 69-52 in Gainesville on Feb. 12, the game in which Kentucky freshman Nerlens Noel sustained a season-ending knee injury. The Wildcats are 3-3 without their dominating big man.

Sitting on the NCAA tournament bubble and time running out on the season, Calipari laid it all out for his players.

Kentucky has faced urgency since losing Noel and then getting pounded at Tennessee in its first game without him. The Wildcats recovered to win the next three including an 85-55 rout of Mississippi State nine days ago, an efficient, dominant performance that suggested they finally had adjusted to life without Noel.

But then, as they have done each time they have shown improvement, the Wildcats took a step back.

After committing 19 turnovers in a 73-60 loss at Arkansas last Saturday, the Wildcats shot 6 of 26 from 3-point range (23 percent) while allowing Georgia to hit 7 of 15 from beyond the arc.

John Calipari

Calipari and his players tripped over each other taking blame for losing to a sub-.500 Bulldogs team: The coach shouldered the weight for his players' lack of cohesion this late in the season, while several Wildcats questioned their lack of toughness in a game they needed to win.

"I'm probably disappointed in myself because I realize I could give more effort out there," said forward Alex Poythress, who had just four points and four rebounds against Georgia. "I feel this season I kind of let some things go by ... not going all out sometimes. You know, it's time to change."

That's true, Kentucky needs somebody to step up against the Gators to lead the Wildcats to the quality win they need to make a legitimate case for an at-large tournament bid — if they can't win the SEC tournament. And if bruising some egos is what it takes to get teammates going, guard Julius Mays is OK with that.

"As the season goes on we've had more guys buying in, but we just haven't had that full buy-in," said the fifth-year senior, who will be honored on Senior Day along with injured guard Twany Beckham.

"But even when we think we do, we always take two steps back. Now, it's come to the point where it's do-or-die for us and the guys that haven't fully bought in, they're going to have to hate me after tomorrow. ... I'm leaving it all out there."

Florida meanwhile seeks to close out the regular season with another win and build momentum for next weekend's SEC tournament in Nashville, Tenn. The Gators earned their fourth league championship and third under coach Billy Donovan with Wednesday's 66-40 rout of Vanderbilt that also capped a 15-0 season at home.

However, the Gators are 5-3 in conference road games and have lost their last two at Missouri and Tennessee. It's a statistic worth noting as the Gators return to Rupp, where they haven't won since 2007.

"I think sometimes on the road you've got to give the opponent some credit," said Florida coach Billy Donovan, noting his team's competitiveness in both games. "I'd be a lot more concerned or alarmed if we're going in and not having a chance to compete or play in the game. But we've been able to do that up to this point in time. On the road, we've got a winning record. I think our guys have done a really good job on the road this year."

Fruit a fixture in Lady Col lineup

Henderson County's senior sharpshooter set for trip to Sweet 16

DARRIN PHEGLEY/THE GLEANER
Henderson County's Ellie Fruit, center, encourages her teammates as they huddle up during a time out while playing University Heights for the regional championship in Princeton on Tuesday night, March 5.

Ellie Fruit has been a fixture in Henderson County's starting lineup throughout her high school career, but her role has changed.

Next week, Fruit will end her playing days with the Lady Colonels at Diddle Arena as her team takes on Anderson County Wednesday in the opening round of the Sweet 16. It will be the third trip to the state tournament for Fruit, who played just a few minutes for the 2009 Final Four team as an eighth-grader and started on the quarterfinal team as a freshman in 2010.

Fruit was strictly a shooter in those days. She made 67 3-pointers that season, which is the highest single-season total of her career.

Though Fruit has made 41 3-pointers this season, she's more likely to put the ball on the floor and drive to the basket.

"She's developed into an all-around player where she can play at the next level," Henderson County coach Jeff Haile said. "She can drive to the basket. She can hit the jump-stop in the lane. She's worked on going to her left or her right. She's no longer just a shooter. Each year, she's got a little better."

She's no longer just a perimeter player either.

Because of the team's lack of size, Fruit played the No. 4 spot for much of this season. At 5-8, Fruit is not the typical power forward.

"I haven't experienced a lot of the four spot, but I'm getting used to it," she said. "I've actually liked the adjustment. It's given me something to work on and something new and it opens up more of my game.

"Being at the four spot, I have more opportunities to drive to the basket, more than just shooting the ball," she said.

Fruit will still go down as one of the program's best long-range shooters. Her 209 career 3-pointers are second only to the 304 made by Krista Hatfield.

Fruit has also taken on a greater role on the glass. At 4.7 boards per game, she is the Lady Colonels' second-leading rebounder.

The versatility that Fruit has shown could be appealing to college coaches. "It allows me to play every position. I think college coaches like that. They know what I can do. They know I'm not just a one position player," said Fruit, who is undecided on her college plans. "I'll worry about that once the season is over."

Henderson County's Ellie Fruit, right, drives to the basket around University Heights' Cache Richardson, left, during their regional championship game in Princeton on Tuesday night, March 5.

Henderson County will often put Fruit in the middle of the offense against a zone defense, letting her take advantage of all of her offensive options. "She can turn and shoot, drive or pass," Haile said. "She's had her back to the basket more than usual. She's able to play facing the basket or with her back to it."

Averaging a team-high 17.9 points per game, Fruit enters the state tournament with 1,609 career points. She's fifth on Henderson County's all-time scoring list and, if the Lady Colonels win a game or two in Bowling Green, has a chance to surpass Nicole Hay, who is in fourth place and 38 points ahead of her.

Getting past the first round won't be easy as Anderson County brings a 32-1 record and a No. 2 state ranking into the first-round contest.

"I like playing a tough game. It's a challenge," Fruit said. "I think our team can face anybody as long as we play our game."

Hoptown rolls past Graves Co. in Sweet 16

The Associated Press

LEXINGTON — Jordan Majors had 17 points and nine rebounds despite foul trouble as Hopkinsville beat Graves County 50-34 on Friday in the quarterfinals of the Kentucky boys' Sweet 16 basketball tournament.

Majors was 6-of-14 for the Tigers (33-4) but was forced to the bench in the second quarter with foul trouble. He picked up his fourth foul with 1:40 left in the third quarter with Graves County leading 27-25 but came back in with about four minutes left in the game to help the Tigers pull away.

The Eagles (27-9) were 13-of-49 from the floor Friday and committed 18 turnovers.

Peyton Puckett led the Eagles with 19 points.

Madison Central 65, Holmes 61: Dominique Hawkins scored 31 points, including all of Madison Central's 14 in the fourth quarter, and the Indians beat Holmes 65-61 in overtime Friday in the quarterfinals of the boys' Sweet 16.

Hawkins, a 6-foot-1 senior, struggled in the first half and was 3-of-14 from the field at the break for Madison Central (30-5). But he and Holmes sophomore James Bolden locked in for a second-half showdown.

Bolden finished with 29 points and 13 rebounds for the Bulldogs (32-3).

Montgomery Co. 66, John Hardin 57: Bryan Wallace scored 21 points, and Montgomery County defeated John Hardin 66-57 on Friday in the quarterfinals of the boys' Sweet 16.

Omar Prewitt, a Kentucky Mr. Basketball finalist who scored 29 points in the Indians' first-round win over Warren Central, finished with 11 points and seven rebounds but played a majority of the game in foul trouble.

Lou. Ballard 68, Knott Co. Central 53: Quinten Snider scored 20 to lead four Ballard players in double figures, and the Bruins advanced to the semifinals of the boys' Sweet 16 with a 68-53 win Friday over Knott County Central.

The Bruins (31-4) simply out-manned Knott County Central, which relied heavily on its five starters.

Rose not quite ready to return

DEERFIELD, Ill. – Injured Chicago Bulls superstar Derrick Rose is "not quite" ready to return from his knee injury, coach Tom Thibodeau said Friday.

The former MVP point guard continues to practice without restrictions, but his return from a torn anterior cruciate ligament in his left knee remains up in the air.

"We'll see when he's ready," Thibodeau said. "He's getting there. He's not quite there yet."

ESPNChicago.com reported Friday that Rose's doctor has cleared him to play, but he has told the team he won't until he can dunk with confidence off his left foot. Thibodeau said a decision "hasn't been finalized yet."

Big East honors Diggins, McGraw

Notre Dame guard Skylar Diggins was selected Big East player of the year for the second consecutive season on Friday, leading an Irish sweep of the conference's three major awards.

Muffet McGraw was voted the coach of the year and guard Jewell Loyd earned freshman of the year honors.

Notre Dame (28-1) won its second straight regular-season Big East title, finishing 16-0 in conference play and earning the top seed in this weekend's Big East tournament, which started Friday at the XL Center in Hartford, Conn.

The Irish have never won a Big East tournament title, but come into this season's tournament on a 23-game winning streak.

Dolphins re-sign receiver Hartline

MIAMI – Coming off his best season, Brian Hartline wanted to stay put.

The veteran receiver signed a five-year deal Friday for nearly $31 million to remain with the Miami Dolphins, his agent said. The contract includes $12.5 million guaranteed, agent Drew Rosenhaus said.

Quarterback Matt Moore signed a two-year deal to remain as Ryan Tannehill's backup rather than test free agency and pursue a possible starting job.

Hartline, who also could have become an unrestricted free agent Tuesday, instead decided to remain with the team that drafted him in 2009.

Cards release safety Wilson

TEMPE, Ariz. – The Arizona Cardinals released Adrian Wilson on Friday, bringing an end to the hard-hitting, five-time Pro Bowl strong safety's 12 seasons with the team.

Wilson, who had been the longest-tenured player on the team, took a pay cut to stay with the Cardinals before last season. But he knew as it was winding down that it would be his final one in the desert, especially when Rashad Johnson took a big chunk of his playing time.

Wilson, one of six NFL players with 25 interceptions and 25 sacks, made the Pro Bowl in 2006 and every year from 2008 through 2011.

U.S. women rout China 5-0 at Cup

ALBUFEIRA, Portugal – The U.S. women's team beat China 5-0 at the Algarve Cup on Friday, staying on top of its group with a second straight victory.

Goalkeeper Nicole Barnhart, starting for the injured Jill Loyden, made a save to spark a counterattack that forward Sydney Leroux finished off in the 14th minute.

Defender Ali Krieger doubled the lead in the 32nd by scoring her first international goal from a cross by Alex Morgan.

The U.S. extended its unbeaten run over China to 21 straight games.

Justin Gant made a free throw with 2.5 seconds remaining and Devonte Brown blocked Ned Cox's shot just before the buzzer as Indiana State defeated Evansville 51-50 in the Missouri Valley Conference quarterfinals on Friday.

The fifth-seeded Sycamores (18-13) advanced to play MVC regular-season champion Creighton on Saturday.

Brown led Indiana State with 11 points, but the big play was his blocked shot after the Purple Aces' length-of-the-court pass was deflected to Cox, who drove toward the basket only to have his layup try knocked away as time ran out.

RJ Mahurin scored 10 points for the Sycamores. Egidijus Mockevicius led Evansville with 11 points and seven rebounds. He fouled out on the play that sent Gant to the line, where Gant made the second of two free throws after neither team had scored for 3 minutes.

DJ Balentine had 10 points for the fourth-seeded Purple Aces (18-14).

■ Creighton 65, Drake 53: Doug McDermott scored 23 points to become Creighton's all-time scoring leader and the top-seeded Bluejays defeated Drake 65-53 on Friday in the quarterfinals of the Missouri Valley Conference tournament.

Creighton (25-7) will play Indiana State in the semifinals today.

Will Artino scored 14 points off the bench and Gregory Echenique had 11 points, 11 rebounds and six blocked shots for Creighton, which enjoyed a 44-26 rebounding edge. Grant Gibbs had eight of the Bluejays' 11 assists.

McDermott, a junior, now has 2,129 points — 13 more than Rodney Buford, who played for the Bluejays from 1995-99.

Richard Carter scored 14 points and Seth VanDeest scored 13 for the ninth-seeded Bulldogs (15-17). Jordan Clarke had 10 rebounds for Drake, which reached the quarterfinal by beating Bradley on Thursday night.

■ Wichita State 69, Missouri State 59: Carl Hall had 18 points and 12 rebounds as Wichita State defeated Missouri State 69-59 Friday night in the quarterfinals of the Missouri Valley Conference tournament.

Ron Baker added 15 points for the second-seeded Shockers (25-7), who will next face the winner of Friday's later game between Northern Iowa and Illinois State.

Marcus Marshall led seventh-seeded Missouri State (11-22) with 25 points and broke the school freshman scoring record with 368 this season. Blake Ahearn (2003-04) had held the mark.

■ Western Ky. 74, La.-Monroe 60: T.J. Price scored 18 points Friday night and Western Kentucky never trailed in beating Louisiana-Monroe 74-60 in the first round of the Sun Belt Conference tournament.

George Fant scored 12 on 6-of-6 shooting for the Hilltoppers (17-15), who are the sixth seed in the tournament. They meet No. 3 seed South Alabama in Saturday's quarterfinals.

Ten players scored for Western Kentucky, which shot 69 percent in the first half on the way to a 46-24 lead. The Hilltoppers finished at 58 percent.

Kyle Koszuta led Louisiana-Monroe (4-23) with 15 points. Millaun Brown scored 12, and Trent Mackey and Amos Olatayo had 10 points each for the Warhawks, who lost their last six games.

Western Kentucky is the defending Sun Belt tournament champion, having won as the No. 7 seed last season.

■ Belmont 82, Tennessee State 73: Ian Clark and Kerron Johnson combined to score 49 points Friday, and Belmont defeated Tennessee State 82-73 in the Ohio Valley Conference semifinals.

Clark hit six 3-pointers en route to 26 points, Johnson finished with 23 points and seven assists, J.J. Mann added 13 points and Blake Jenkins 10 points and seven rebounds for the Bruins, who won their fourth straight regular-season conference championship, the previous three coming in the Atlantic Sun Conference.

Belmont (25-6), undefeated at home this season, led 32-29 at intermission and opened the second half on an 11-3 run to pull ahead 43-32.

■ Rutgers 56, Seton Hall 51: Myles Mack scored 15 points and hit two go-ahead free throws with 4:20 to play as Rutgers posted a 56-51 victory over Seton Hall Friday night, sweeping the season series from its New Jersey rival for the first time since 2000-01.

Jerome Seagears added 10 points and Mike Poole hit a clutch jumper with 1:41 to play and made a late steal to seal the game for the Scarlet Knights (14-15, 5-13 Big East), who snapped a five-game losing streak.

More birdies for Tiger, and a two-stroke lead at Doral

Wire reports

Tiger Woods struggled on the practice range, and he didn't feel much better two holes into his second round Friday at the Cadillac Championship. He would not have guessed this would be the day to set a personal record for birdies, much less wind up with a two-shot lead.

"All I need is one shot," he said. "And as soon as I feel it on one, I can pretty much carry through. And I did that today."

It was a 4-iron on the par-3 fourth hole, the toughest on the Blue Monster.

Woods hit a bullet with a slight fade at the left edge of the green and heard the crowd cheer as the slope and the grain took the ball to within 4 feet for birdie.

And just like that, he was on his way.

In a World Golf Championship with the biggest names in the hunt, Woods ran off six birdies in an eight-hole stretch around the turn in a clean, crisp exhibition. That sent him to a 7-under 65 and a two-shot lead over former U.S. Open champion Graeme McDowell.

Woods has made 17 birdies in two rounds, his most ever on the PGA Tour, though that wasn't the most important number.

"It left me a two-shot lead," Woods said.

He was at 13-under 131, his lowest 36-hole score on tour since the 2009 AT&T National.

Woods followed that 4-iron with a wedge he stuffed to inside 2 feet. He added a collection of 10- to 15-foot birdie putts, and ended his big run with another 4-iron with a totally different shape, this one high and soft to 15 feet on the 224-yard 13th hole. Those par 3s ranked as the two toughest at Doral on Friday, and he birdied them both.

A birdie-birdie finish by McDowell gave him a 67 and prevented a dream final group for the weekend at Doral — Woods and longtime nemesis Phil Mickelson.

Mickelson, sparked by a visit to Augusta National earlier in the week, hit a 9-iron that stopped inches from dropping for a hole-in-one on the par-3 ninth. He had a 67 and was three shots behind, along with Steve Stricker (67).

Rory McIlroy showed signs of turning the corner with a 69, although he ended with a sloppy three-putt bogey. It was his first round under par this year, a small consolation for the world's No. 1 player. He was still 11 shots behind Woods.

■ Puerto Rico Open: Andres Romero shot his second straight 7-under 65 on Friday to take a one-stroke lead in the PGA Tour's Puerto Rico Open.

Scott Brown was second after a 63. He eagled the par-4 seventh and had eight birdies and a bogey.

Cards to host Irish in finale today

The Associated Press

Louisville vs. Notre Dame
Site: KFC Yum! Center
Tipoff: 3 p.m. CST
Television: CBS

LOUISVILLE – Rick Pitino calls Saturday's game against Notre Dame the most important home contest of his coaching tenure at Louisville.

The coach said he feels that way because the season finale against the No. 24 Irish (23-7, 11-6 Big East) is a rematch of the Cardinals' 104-101, five-overtime thrilling loss to Notre Dame last month.

A win would give No. 8 Louisville (25-5, 13-4) at least a share of the Big East title and a successful home sendoff for senior point guard Peyton Siva and center Gorgui Dieng — a duo Pitino said is "as special as any two players I've ever coached."

Siva and Dieng, a junior, will participate in Senior Day festivities along with Mike Marra, whose playing career ended before the season due to a left knee injury.

"All Senior Days are special but these two young men, they epitomize what you would want in a student athlete in all regards," Pitino said of Siva and Dieng.

Louisville is 100-38 the past four seasons and reached the Final Four last year. But when Pitino speaks of Siva and Dieng, it's not the game day accolades he thinks of first.

The pair steps onto the practice court every day with the same enthusiasm they had on their first days on campus, Pitino said. He praised their "naïve innocence" about life.

"In today's world of egotistical, selfish athletes that come along, here you have the polar opposites," Pitino said. "They're just unique for this day and age where ego is very much part of the culture."

Siva is just the school's second player ever to earn Academic All-America honors (second team). Dieng, who came to the U.S. from Senegal knowing little English besides "Hello," speaks five languages.

Pitino thinks so highly of both that he named thoroughbreds after them.

Siva has started every game the past three seasons, is second all-time in assists (626) and sits just five steals (225) behind Louisville career Darrell "Dr. Dunkenstein" Griffith.

Dieng set the single-season school record for blocks (128) last year and is averaging nearly 10 points and 10 rebounds a game this year.

Siva — the Seattle native who was named last year's Big East tournament MVP and preseason player of the year for 2012-13 — said the Louisville faithful "really took me in like I was one of their own."

Saturday's pre-game ceremony will be emotional, but he'll try to keep his in check, considering win would give the Cardinals can clinch a share of the school's second regular season Big East title since joining the league in 2005-06.

"For us, this is a very big game because it's a chance to win the Big East regular season title or to share it," Siva said. "It's a chance for higher seeding in the (NCAA) tournament and higher seeding in New York.

"After the game, then the tears and everything can come out."

Dieng said his ultimate career goal is not just making the NBA but staying in the league 10-15 years. First, Dieng is focused on fulfilling some collegiate dreams.

Mathies, Lady Wildcats top Vandy in SEC tourney

The Associated Press

DULUTH, Ga. – A'dia Mathies had 16 points and five steals and No. 7 Kentucky kept its lead in double figures the last 25 minutes of its 76-65 win over Vanderbilt in the SEC tournament on Friday night.

The last point Vanderbilt trailed by single digits was at 26-17. Kentucky's big lead was 22 points at 52-30 early in the second half.

Kentucky (26-4) had an impressive start to its postseason after setting a school record with 13 SEC regular-season wins. The Wildcats closed the regular season with a home win over Tennessee to clinch the No. 2 seed in the tournament.

Kentucky advanced to its fifth semifinal in the last eight years. Its only tournament championship came in 1982.

DeNesh Stallworth had 14 points in only 21 minutes for Kentucky.

Tiffany Clarke, playing in her hometown, had 24 points and 12 rebounds for Vanderbilt (20-11). Jasmine Lister had 17 points.

Vanderbilt made only 9 of 19 free throws.

Vanderbilt's only lead came on the first basket of the game. An inside basket by Stallworth started a 9-0 Kentucky run.

Big East completes its sports breakup

■ Seven basketball schools split from football-playing members

By Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Big East made its split official Friday, with seven basketball schools breaking away from the football-playing members in a deal that takes effect on July 1.

Commissioner Mike Aresco told The Associated Press that the seven Catholic schools which are leaving to form a basketball-centric conference will get the Big East name, along with the opportunity to play their league tournament in Madison Square Garden.

The football members, most of which are newcomers to a conference that has been ravaged by realignment, get a cash haul of roughly $100 million. That group includes just one founding Big East member — Connecticut — and will have to find a name for what is essentially a new league.

"It's been an arduous four months but we got to the right place," Aresco said in a phone interview. "I think both conferences have good futures."

Aresco, who will remain commissioner of the football league, would not disclose the financial part of the settlement.

A person familiar with the negotiations told the AP earlier this week that the football schools will receive about $100 million from a $110 million stash the conference had built up over the last two and a half years through exit and entry fees as well as NCAA men's basketball tournament funds.

Aresco said the football schools have not chosen a conference name and there are no favorites yet. "We can get on with reinventing ourselves and re-establishing our brand," he said.

JACQUELYN MARTIN/ASSOCIATED PRESS
Big East football schools have made a deal that will allow the seven departing basketball schools to keep the name Big East and start playing in their own conference next season.

He also said they have not determined how the money from the separation agreement will be split among the members. The person familiar with the negotiations said the bulk of the money will go to holdover members Cincinnati, Connecticut and South Florida.

The split with the basketball members as well as a new TV deal with ESPN for the football schools still must be ratified by the school presidents. Aresco said that should come soon and without glitches.

Next up on the agenda for the football schools, Aresco said, is to find a 12th member and venues for future basketball tournaments.

The settlement will bring the Big East back to its origins. When it was formed in 1979, it banded together a group of mostly small, mostly private schools located in and around Northeast cities.

"I don't mean to speak for all seven schools, but the schools that are breaking off, we're excited to start a new chapter," said Georgetown basketball coach John Thompson III, whose father led the Hoyas to three Final Four appearances in the 1980s.

"The Big East has been something that has been special to me personally and to everyone that's been involved with it. But we're in an era of change, and as much as that one segment, that one era, that one time of the Big East, will always be special, will always mean a lot ... it's time for change."

The seven schools breaking away from the football schools include some of the Big East's founding members and most recognizable teams: Georgetown, St. John's, Providence, Seton Hall, Villanova, Marquette and DePaul. They are expected to sign a television rights deal with Fox, add at least two more schools and start competing in the 2013 fall semester.

"We are grateful to Commissioner Mike Aresco for spearheading an agreement that truly represents the best path forward for each of our great institutions and the thousands of student-athletes who compete for our schools annually," the presidents of the seven basketball schools said in a joint statement.

The football conference now known as the Big East will consist next season of Connecticut, South Florida, Cincinnati, Temple, Rutgers and Louisville, along with incoming members Memphis, Central Florida, SMU and Houston.

Rutgers and Louisville will likely be playing their last seasons in the conference before switching leagues, to the Big Ten and Atlantic Coast Conference, respectively.

Tulane and East Carolina are scheduled to join the football league in 2014, and Navy comes aboard in 2015. Tulsa is being targeted as the next addition to the conference.

Keselowski claims pole after qualifying rainout

Wire reports

Brad Keselowski will start on the pole after heavy rain forced NASCAR to cancel qualifying for Sunday's race at the Las Vegas Motor Speedway.

The track got steady rain all morning Friday and again in the early afternoon after a brief break, forcing NASCAR to scrap practice and qualifying in Las Vegas for the first time. The speedway urged fans to take cover from rain, high wind and lightning when the afternoon storm broke over the desert north of the Strip.

"I was just thinking when I walked in, with this being Vegas and all, what the odds would be of a rainout in Vegas," Keselowski said. "I bet that was pretty high."

Sunday's field will be set by points and the NASCAR rule book, giving the pole to last season's Sprint Cup series champion. The top 36 spots are set by owners' points from last year, with the rest filled out by points or qualifying attempts.

"That's a really good deal," said Keselowski, the first-time champ. "It's one of the perks, I guess, of being the champion in the first few races. This is the first time I've had a decent starting position in a rainout."

Mike Bliss will miss the race because of the cancellation of qualifying.

Keselowski will be on the front row alongside Clint Bowyer, last season's second-place finisher. Daytona 500 champion Jimmie Johnson and teammate Kasey Kahne will be in the second row.

Although the rain also forced the cancellation of Friday's practice, no drivers seemed particularly concerned after going through Thursday's open test of the new Gen-6 car.

"We had more than enough practice this weekend," Dale Earnhardt Jr. said. "So I'm not too worried about what we didn't get to do today, because yesterday was way more than we needed, to be honest."

■ NASCAR driver AJ Allmendinger will compete in two IndyCar races this season including May's Indianapolis 500 with Roger Penske's team.

Allmendinger will drive the No. 2 car, which will be sponsored by IZOD, at Indy and April 7 at Birmingham, Ala.

■ Danica Patrick says she's fine after getting hit in the head by a rock on a dirt track.

Patrick got smacked by a stray rock while attending a race Thursday night, leaving her with a sore head. She had a brief conversation with medical staff Friday, but felt no problems.

Time for buzzer beaters

■ Last-second shooters are eager for basketball's big moments

By Aaron Beard
Associated Press

It's March and in college basketball that means tournament time — and last-second buzzer beaters.

Memorable shots by Duke's Christian Laettner and Valparaiso's Bryce Drew in the NCAA tournament have earned a permanent place among the game's lore. Whoever steps up this month will be unafraid of the moment. They'll probably have the ability to create their own shot and have the skills to take advantage of what the defense gives them — a look at 3-pointer, a mid-range jumper or an open lane to the basket.

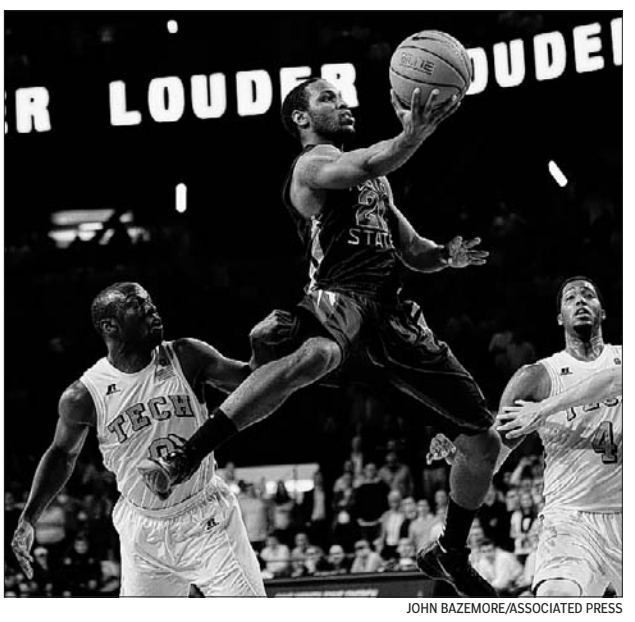

For a handful of current players like Florida State's Michael Snaer, it has become an art.

He's one of a select group of players who have at least twice hit a shot in the last 8 seconds to force overtime or win a game. While everyone might want to take that shot, there aren't many who have proven more than once they'll deliver in that big moment.

Snaer has hit six winners, four this year for half his team's Atlantic Coast Conference wins. He knows the ball is coming his way late in a close game — and he's always ready.

"You've just got to play basically off instinct," he said. "And the players that are able to do that and just clear their whole thought process ... those are the players that are the great ones that are able to take those shots and make those shots."

There are plenty of players with high-profile winners in the past two seasons, including Indiana's Christian Watford against Kentucky last year and Butler's Roosevelt Jones against now-No. 1 Gonzaga in January. But research by The Associated Press found there are at least 13 players who have hit those shots more than once in their careers.

JOHN BAZEMORE/ASSOCIATED PRESS
Florida State guard Michael Snaer (21) drives past Georgia Tech guard Mfon Udofia (0) and forward Robert Carter (4) to score the game-winning basket as time expires in a game on Feb. 5 in Atlanta. Florida State won 56-54.

The list includes: FSU's Snaer, Niagara's Juan'ya Green, Nevada's Deonte Burton, Indiana State's Jake Odum, South Dakota State's Chad White, Delaware's Devon Saddler, George Mason's Sherrod Wright, Arizona's Mark Lyons, UCLA's Larry Drew II, Georgia State's Rashaad Anderson, Oral Roberts' Damen Bell-Holter, and the Massachusetts duo of Terrell Vinson and Chaz Williams.

Lyons and Drew even have last-second winners or OT-forcing shots at more than one school. Lyons did it at Xavier last year, while Drew did it at North Carolina in the 2010 NIT.

"It takes a lot of confidence," Wildcats coach Sean Miller said. "With that confidence, (it's) the ability to endure criticism because missing a game-winning shot sometimes is the problem of someone willing to take it. It's not that they don't believe in their ability as much as, in my mind, I don't know if they don't feel good about the aftermath if that thing doesn't go in. To me, that overwhelms them."

At Niagara, coach Joe Mihalich has watched Green grow from a deferential freshman to a fearless sophomore capable of handling those chaotic final moments.

"You've got to want the ball," Mihalich said. "When you make a great play, that's what makes you a great player. ... When you make one or two, then it's just like, 'Gimme more, gimme more.' You get kind of addicted to it."

Green first hit a runner with 0.2 seconds left last year against St. Francis (Pa.). This year, he hit a 3 with 0.5 seconds left against Iona in overtime (he forced OT on a 3 with 4.5 seconds left in that one) and hit a 3 with 1.5 seconds left against Marist.

As a result, Green has earned the nickname "Win'ya" from the team's radio announcer.

"After the first one, you're still kind of nervous about it," Green said. "You're like, 'It might've been a lucky shot and it went in.' After that second one, you just feel confident enough to take that shot in any game.

"I think it comes down to the adrenaline. Once your adrenaline is pumping, you have no fear."

Players who have come through more than once say they have more confidence that the next one will go in.

"I feel lucky to get those opportunities," said South Dakota State's White, who hit two last-second 3s in an 11-day span in November. "I just feel like it's an honor to have that opportunity to shoot it and people believing you're going to make it."

For Odum, that belief began when with a runner with 0.5 seconds left against Evansville in the 2011 Missouri Valley Conference tournament. This year, he hit a leaner with 0.8 seconds left to beat Miami on Christmas Day, then hit two free throws with 0.3 seconds left to beat Northern Iowa in January.

"Sometimes you've got to just will it in," Odum said. "It might be a bad shot or the end of the clock and you have to take a bad one. Some players have that feel. ... I don't know if it's really competitiveness or toughness but a combination of those two and just confidence — knowing you can hit that at the end of the game."

Craig, Cardinals agree on a five-year contract

Wire reports

Allen Craig, coming off a breakout season with the St. Louis Cardinals, agreed Friday to a $31 million, five-year contract that could be worth $43 million over six seasons.

Craig gets $1.75 million this year, $2.75 million in 2014, $5.5 million in 2015, $9 million in 2016 and $11 million in 2017. The Cardinals have a $13 million option for 2018 with a $1 million buyout.

The 28-year-old Craig would have been eligible for salary arbitration next winter and for free agency after the 2016 World Series.

He has 150 RBIs in 238 big league games and was sixth in the NL last season with a .307 average. He had 22 home runs and 92 RBIs despite not playing his first game until May 1 following offseason surgery on his right knee.

Craig is a career .300 hitter and became the Cardinals' primary first baseman last year after Lance Berkman got hurt. Craig also made 30 starts in the outfield.

"I think he's proven he's the type of player that, when he's in the lineup, can make an impact," Cardinals general manager John Mozeliak said.

■ Cardinals 16, Nationals 10: Jordan Zimmermann was hit hard, allowing eight runs and nine hits in three innings Friday during the Washington Nationals' 16-10 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals.

Zimmermann has given up 13 runs and 16 hits over nine innings in three spring training starts.

Matt Carpenter was 4 for 4 with two doubles and an RBI for St. Louis, which had 17 hits. Rob Johnson had two doubles and three RBIs, Ronny Cedeno also drove in three runs and Shane Robinson hit a grand slam off Nathan Karns.

Winner Shelby Miller, making his first spring training start, gave up two runs and three hits in three innings.

Advice

Teenager wants to be queen — just for one day

COLUMNIST

Dear Amy: I am the younger of two daughters. My sister is three years older, and we are very close. She is away at college.

You'd think that since she is away from home, I would get more of my parents' focus. But that has not happened.

It's not as if they neglect me, but I don't feel my needs, wishes and dreams are on the family agenda.

My 16th birthday is in roughly seven months. I want it to be special. I've always dreamed of having a day of just celebrating me.

I remember back to when it was my sister's 16th birthday, they talked about it for months ahead of time, with plans, a surprise party and a special visit from family members.

But my birthday is rapidly approaching and not a word has been spoken about plans for my day.

Should I tell my parents how I feel or just assume they're working on something — or should I let it go?

— The Forgotten Birthday Girl

Dear Forgotten: Your situation reminds me of the movie "Sixteen Candles." If you've never seen it, you should.

Your folks may have started planning something. If you have special things you want to do on that day, definitely tell them. You should also offer to help.

Talk to your sister about this. She can rattle your parents' cage a little bit.

Parents get tired. They also get a little lazy when they have only one well-behaved teenager still at home.

You may have to work a little harder to get their attention — but you deserve to have it, not only on your birthday but every day.

Dear Amy: I am terribly hurt. Due to my husband's health problems, I have had to do everything around our house for the last couple of months, and this will continue for another couple of months.

My husband's friends have said that if he needs something to just let them know.

Their wives are also my friends, but not one has asked if there is something she could do for me — like fix a meal, go to the store or help with the house.

If I had help, I could have dedicated more time to my husband's care. I cannot understand why they haven't offered.

I would like to suggest to others who have friends in our situation to not just ask, but insist.

I'd be so grateful if one of them said: "I'm coming over at 10 o'clock to vacuum for you. Would that be OK?"

I know I would be there for a friend in need.

— Hurting in Colorado

Dear Hurting: Many people don't know how to jump in and lend a hand. Because of this, sometimes you have to be brave enough to ask. Wouldn't you, if someone reached out to say, "Hey, I'm feeling overwhelmed. Would you be willing to help me out this week with ..."?

I'd like to recommend caringbridge.org as a way for you (and others with illness in the family) to ask for and organize help from people in your circle.

This smart concept makes it easier to reach out and offer to help — and to ask for it.

You will also be inspired by the suggestions for caregivers who, like you, are in it for the long haul.

Protect e-reader from beach sand with sealed bag

COLUMNIST

Dear Heloise: I have an e-reader that I take on vacation to cut the weight and bulk of books I used to carry. A beach vacation made me find a way to protect it from sand and surf.

I take off the cover and put the e-reader into a zipper-top bag and seal. I can work all of the pages and read without removing the bag. It keeps the book free of sand and dirt.

— Judy McMullan

Dear Heloise: Here in Ohio, neighbors and friends take food to the family's home when there is a death. There was enough food within two days to overflow three refrigerators.

All was greatly appreciated. However, adding to the stress was the additional kitchen duty of cleaning baked-on foodstuff, and dishes and pans we had to try to label for return.

Also, "helpers" may not be able to properly label dishes. People called in three weeks wanting to know if we had their dish, the lid was missing when a dish was returned, or they received a dish that was not theirs.

This certainly adds to stress.

It would be helpful when you want to help to:

■ Call to determine if food is needed. Maybe in a couple of weeks, the family would really appreciate a prepared meal, a sack of groceries, or to be taken out for a bite to eat. Kindnesses can be extended for a month or two.

■ Take food only in disposable containers.

■ A wonderful friend brought a supply of disposable cups and glasses, dessert and dinner plates, soup bowls, forks and spoons, napkins, paper towels, plastic wrap, aluminum foil, food and kitchen garbage bags.

■ A neighbor volunteered to have a supply of ice cubes ready for use.

■ Frozen foods (pizza, lasagna, etc.), if not immediately needed, can be put in a freezer for later.

Prozac and alcohol do not mix

DR. KEITH ROACH
COLUMNIST

Dear Dr. Roach: My son is 57 and takes a lot of prescription medicine. Among them are Prozac and a medicine for rheumatoid arthritis, which I'm told is a mild cancer drug.

My son thinks drinking alcohol does not affect any of the medicines he takes and doesn't counteract what the medicine is supposed to do. I told him it does, but he won't pay attention to me.

— F.S.

Dear F.S.: The greater the number of medications, the higher the likelihood that there will be a significant interaction — with each other, with alcohol or even with food.

But just to look at the two you mentioned, Prozac certainly interacts with alcohol, making the alcohol effect more intense: He will be more affected by the same amount of alcohol while on Prozac.

The second medication could be methotrexate (just a guess), and methotrexate can cause damage to the liver, and its toxicity is likely much worse with alcohol.

I wouldn't recommend any alcohol for someone on Prozac and methotrexate, and that doesn't even take into consideration other medications he might be on.

Dear Dr. Roach: In June 2011, I was prescribed colchicine for rheumatoid arthritis by a specialist during a doctor's visit, due to having a rheumatoid factor of 24.3 (I am 50 years old). I took the drug for less than a month, and was fine until the pain resurfaced in December 2012.

My personal physician would not authorize a refill for the prescription colchicine, as she did not understand why the specialist prescribed this for my condition.

In the meantime, I've been taking Tylenol to alleviate the pain in my hand, knee and shoulder. What treatment/prescription would you suggest?

— S.B.

Dear S.B.: I don't blame your primary-care doctor, because I am confused, too. However, you bring up some important points.

First, an elevated rheumatoid factor is very common and does not mean you have a rheumatic illness such as rheumatoid arthritis.

Second, colchicine is not a common treatment for rheumatoid arthritis anyway. However, it is a preferred treatment for an often-missed condition called pseudogout.

Pseudogout is called "pseudo-" because it looks like gout in some ways. Both of them are caused by a crystal in the joint, causing joint pain, but pseudogout originates with a crystal of calcium pyrophosphate as opposed to the uric acid crystals found in gout.

Pseudogout usually is diagnosed by X-ray, but also may be diagnosed by taking some fluid out of the joint with a needle.

Your PCP and specialist need to talk to each other, and/or you need to know exactly why you were prescribed this medicine.

Christians give their lives to God, but we still have to beware of devil

When we go into a store to buy something, it becomes ours. When we pay the price for an item, it becomes our possession. We bought the item with our own money.

At the time of purchase, the ownership of the item or items is transferred from the store or the manufacturer to us.

After we pay the price for something, it is ours to do whatever we want with it. No one can rightfully take it from us.

Everything has a cost to it. Nothing worth having in this life is free. Even the very liberties that we enjoy as Americans are ours by the tremendous sacrifice of the men and women who risk their own lives to defend it.

We are blessed to live in the world's greatest country, and yet we take so much for granted.

As citizens of this great land that we call home, we have much to be thankful for, but so often we hear people grumble and complain about what is wrong with our country and its leaders rather than being truly grateful for what we do have.

It has been said that true freedom is not free and truer words than these have never been spoken. As so often is the case, we don't realize what we have until we lose it, and then we find out how special it was to us.

Man can rob us of our worldly possessions, cause us much pain, grief, affliction and sorrow, but one thing they can never take from us is the hope we have in Christ.

The reason is explained in the Bible in First Corinthians 6:19-20: "What? Don't you know that your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit which is in you which you have of God, and you are not your own? For you are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and your spirit, which is God's."

Often you will hear people say, "This is my body, and I will do what I want to with it!" It is not your body if you have been redeemed by the blood of the Lamb.

Before you go shooting it up with all kinds of drugs and illicit substances and marking it up with all kind of wild and crazy tattoos, I urge you to get the owner's permission.

We do all sorts of things to this body of ours because we have the mistaken notion that it belong to us and that it's really nobody business what we do with it.

When we become Christians, we give God the rights to our lives. We surrender our rights to live and conduct our lives over to the lordship of Jesus Christ to honor Him and do those things pleasing to our Savior.

When we give Him our lives at the time of our new birth in Him, we give Him exclusive rights to do what He wants to with our lives.

We belong to Him. We are His. We are private property. But we still have to contend with the enemy each day of our lives.

Satan is out to destroy us and our witness for the Lord Jesus Christ. While he can't take away our salvation, he can make life challenging for us.

The Bible challenges us to "Be sober and vigilant, because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walks about seeking whom he may devour" (I Pet 5:8).

We should constantly be on high alert against the enemy.

He will go to any lengths he can to cause us to stumble and fall. But God, through Jesus Christ by the Holy Spirit, gives us the strength we need to have victory over the wicked devices of Satan.

We don't have to worry about our adversary. We are told from the Word of God that "greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world."

We see the disastrous effects that Satan has on our society and the world everywhere we look. There is nowhere we can go to escape the harmful effects that he has on our world.

However, we don't have to be fearful, discouraged or dismayed by all that we see going on in the world around us.

As we look at our world today and all that is happening even in our midst, it is easy to become pessimistic about what we see. But we have to remember the words of Paul when he said, "We are more than conquerors through Him who loves us."

It makes no difference what we may be going through in life, He is always there for us, giving us the help and the strength we need even when we are facing life's hardest battles.

He wants you to know, that above all else, He loves you and proved it when He died on the cross for our sins.

Our salvation is a priceless and loving gift from the Father to us. We can never earn it; all we can do is to accept it with a grateful heart and a glad spirit.

Ask Him even now to forgive you of your sins and take up permanent abode in your heart.

Until next week — God bless.

God can help you do what's right for you

Dear Rev. Graham: I made a whole list of New Year's resolutions this year and I've hardly kept any of them, although the year has barely started.

I really want to be a better person, but something keeps holding me back. Why am I such a miserable failure?

— N.K.

Dear N.K.: I suspect that if a poll were taken of all the people who made a list of New Year's resolutions this year, the majority would probably say what you've said. Jesus' words apply to us all: "The spirit is willing, but the body is weak" (Mark 14:38).

Why can't we keep our resolutions to become better people? Sometimes, of course, it's because our resolutions haven't really been resolutions at all, but only been vague wishes.

Other resolutions may have been sincere, but they were unrealistic, or the person who made them had no practical plan to reach their goal.

I might resolve to lose 30 pounds, for example, but if I have no realistic plan to do so, I probably won't get it done.

But the real problem is inside of us — within our own hearts and minds.

Although we may hate to admit it, we are morally and spiritually crippled, unable to do everything that's right and turn away from everything wrong.

The reason, the Bible says, is because we all have a spiritual "disease" — the "disease" of sin.

This is why we need Christ, for only He can forgive our past and give us the strength we need to do what is right.

Don't despair, but repent of your sins and by faith ask Christ to come into your life.

Then ask Him to help you become the person He wants you to be — and He will, as His Spirit works within you.

The Bible says, "I can do everything through him who gives me strength" (Philippians 4:13).

Longtime tailors to popes praying for perfect fit

By Daniela Petroff
Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — The favorite guessing game in Rome these days is who will be the next pope. Few take it more seriously than the Gammarelli family, tailors to the Vatican for more than 200 years.

For the past seven conclaves, Gammarelli has prepared three identical white outfits in small, medium and large for the new pontiff's first appearance on the balcony of St. Peter's Basilica.

Here's a look at what goes into making a new pope look fabulous for the historic moment:

Papal tailors: The papal outfits are on display in the window of the small wood-paneled store nestled in the shadow of the Pantheon, where the family moved in 1850 from the original "bottega" (artisan shop) founded just around the corner in 1798.

Before the start of the conclave, the outfits will be delivered to the Vatican and left in a room next to the Sistine Chapel, where the newly elected pope changes into his new clothes.

"We hope we got it right," said Lorenzo Gammarelli, the sixth-generation scion of the family business. He explained that the measurements this time around came from a study of the sizes on file of their habitual cardinal customers.

If the pope is their most illustrious shopper, the Gammarelli's daily bread-and-butter comes from dressing prelates in Rome and abroad, in particular the cardinals who will be electing the new pontiff.

Will it fit? The Gammarellis make a new set of outfits for each conclave. And sewing custom-made clothes for an unknown customer has had its share of hitches.

Back in 1958 the rotund John XXIII appeared on the balcony with safety pins holding together the back of his cassock. The brand new pope had inadvertently put on the small size and attendants had to slit the robe so that from the front all looked well.

Twenty years later, the broad-shouldered, athletic John Paul II had to squeeze into the large size. Most recently in April 2005, Benedict XVI showed up on the balcony with the sleeves of the black sweater he had worn in the chilly Sistine Chapel showing through the white sleeves of the cassock.

Papal dress code: So what exactly does a pope wear, then, for his first encounter with the flock? The basic garment is the hand-stitched white wool cassock with white cape and wide silk sleeves.

The cassock is fastened by 33 silk buttons recalling the years of the life of Christ, and is worn with a silk brocade sash with gold fringe. Later this sash will have the new pope's papal seal embroidered on it.

Over the cassock he will wear the classic burgundy red mozzetta, a short elbow-length cape worn by high prelates for formal occasions, and a gold embroidered stole — either red or white.

The mozzetta in the Gammarelli window is the velvet white fur trimmed version, long in disuse until Benedict brought it back for winter outings. Otherwise the mozzetta is in silk brocade.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Shop owner Lorenzo Gammarelli pulls out sun shades over his shop window where three sets of papal outfits are displayed in Rome.

According to Gammarelli, papal red differs from cardinal red.

Whereas cardinal red signifies the willingness of the individual to offer up his life for the church, the deeper papal red (actually close to purple) derives from the Roman emperors, and originally signified imperial power. Over the years the basic color became white so that the pope could always be easily identified.

Head and feet: The pope wears a white "zucchetto," the beanie-like hat that bishops wear in purple and cardinals have in red.

"Some men have lots of hair, some hardly any, this makes a difference," Gammarelli said. Here, too, the tailors offer three sizes.

Benedict attracted a lot of fashionista comment on his bright red shoes, which at first were identified as Prada but later disowned by the luxury label. In fact red shoes make up part of the traditional papal garb.

Until the mid-1960s, popes wore red velvet slippers embroidered with a gold cross, and until not long before that people paid homage to the pope by kissing his slippered foot.

Eventually each new pope chooses his own shoe style. John Paul, for example, favored a sturdy loafer, in a toned-down maroon red. But Gamarelli holds sway in the new pope's balcony debut footwear — and is offering three sizes of a simple, albeit very red, moccasin.

Tradition and personal choice: The Gammarellis dress the pope from head to toe, from zucchetto to white socks, but underwear is a personal choice. "Each brings his own,"Gammarelli said.

Whether the new pope keeps on wearing Gammarelli is also a personal choice.

Of the seven popes they have officially dressed, starting with Pius XI in 1922, only Pius XII declined their services for his papacy, preferring his aristocratic family's personal tailor.

Benedict XVI shared his favors between Gammarelli and the local ecclesiastic tailors nearer the Vatican whom he befriended in his many years as head of the Vatican's Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith.

"REJOICE WITH ME!"

On Easter Sunday I will I am going to be one of the happiest people in Henderson County because I will have a bowl of popcorn that evening. If you are a popcorn aficionado which means you eat popcorn at least five times week, you know that to go for 40 days without popcorn is major!

The psychological name for this is 'delayed gratification' and it works! If you want to keep Christ in Christmas or the Risen Jesus in Easter then prepare for those celebrations with a little fasting.

I grew up in a part of the country where the men loved beer but many would make it a matter of honor not to drink beer during Lent. Therefore, as a child I learned that Lent was serious business.

We have so much in this country, that we simply take it for granted. In the southern hemisphere people never make that mistake. When the motto is 'Here today, Gone tomorrow', you very quickly begin to see every day and every breath is precious.

This is where fasting comes in… a heighten awareness that everything is a gift and a simple pleasure such as eating a bowl of popcorn should not be taken for granted but eaten whole heartedly with gratitude.

Cuba looks to curb deadly scourge of jaywalking

By Peter Orsi
Associated Press

HAVANA – Teenagers dash across a six-lane thoroughfare and launch themselves into the balmy waters of the Straits of Florida.

A couple skips the sidewalk and strolls down an unlit street as bulky 1950s cars with bald tires and worn brakes zip past inches away.

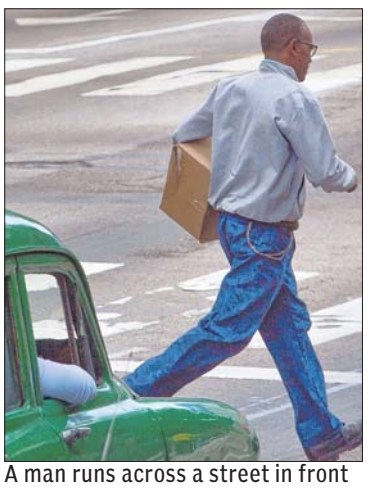

"Here there is no custom of using the crosswalk," said Maria Rubio, a 55-year-old Havana resident who had just sauntered across the six lanes of bustling 23rd Street, mere steps from a zebra-striped crossing. "We simply cross wherever we are."

Jaywalking is endemic in Havana, where islanders seem to treat the streets like a real-life version of the video game Frogger, weaving in and out of traffic while risking life and limb to reach the other side. Locals call it "toreando autos" — "bullfighting with cars."

Now authorities are trying to do something about the lack of caution, which they say contributes to hundreds of pedestrians being struck each year.

A recent full-page spread in the state newspaper Juventud Rebelde, titled "Lethal imprudence," showed photos of Cubans darting in front of oncoming cars. It also gave rare data on traffic accidents, saying more than 1,300 pedestrians are mowed down each year in this nation of 11 million people. About one in seven of those accidents is fatal.

"A catalog of suffering that can be overcome only through love of life and sufficient caution," the brief accompanying text said.

A man runs across a street in front of a slow moving car in Havana, Cuba, last week.

Official newspapers like Juventud Rebelde are commonly used to push campaigns against various forms of "social indiscipline," such as wasteful overuse of air conditioners and tardiness by workers in getting to their government jobs.

Outsiders who visit Havana often remark how little traffic there is for a city of its size, about 2.1 million people. But the streets have recovered much of their bustle in the years since the Soviet Union's collapse in the 1990s caused severe fuel shortages that idled all but a few vehicles.

New cars are flowing in from Asia and Europe even as older models stay in circulation long past the time when they would be scrapped in other countries. There are no statistics, but traffic is undoubtedly getting heavier each year.

The increased danger hasn't made any dent in lax attitudes about safety on the streets, as Associated Press journalists found while touring Havana's chaotic streets.

Here a man lay knocked to the asphalt by a '50s Detroit classic, quickly attended to by the driver and passersby amid cries of "He's alive!" and "Don't move him!" At another spot, two women stood in the middle of the road trying to thumb a ride to avoid using Havana's irregular, crowded buses. Elsewhere, a woman pushing a stroller hurried across an avenue to beat approaching traffic.

Elementary school children streaming across a busy street in the Vedado neighborhood as classes let out said there's never a crossing guard to keep them safe.

Back on 23rd, a traffic cop looked on with a bored expression as a dozen pedestrians crossed against the light.

And there was no interference with the teenagers who were racing across the Malecon boulevard to build up speed for leaping into the sea.

The jaywalking problem is exacerbated by Havana's sorely deficient infrastructure. Along a 5-mile (8-kilometer) stretch of the Malecon and 5th Avenue, a major artery with a speed limit of 50 mph (80 kph), there's not a single pedestrian crossing and just five stoplights.

Crumbling and sometimes nonexistent sidewalks have locals so accustomed to walking in the road that many stroll in the only slightly better maintained streets even when a good sidewalk exists.

Motorists complain that driving the Malecon is particularly harrowing on weekend nights when thousands gather to socialize and get tipsy, spilling out onto the slippery, often unlit boulevard.

Given the relative lack of streetlamps, many drivers leave their high beams on to illuminate the potholes and jaywalkers — and in doing so, blind other motorists from the same hazards.

"When I'm driving, especially at night, it frightens me to think someone could suddenly appear, and if I hit him I go to jail," said Alejandro Llanes, who makes his living as a driver but had just strolled casually across 23rd Street in the middle of the block. "But look at the lack of culture we have. When I'm a pedestrian, I do the same thing."

Just then two city buses halted in the middle of the road, far from any apparent bus stop, and began disgorging passengers into traffic as cars whizzed by.

"Look at that!" Llanes exclaimed. "If something happens there, whose fault is it?"

Cuban law prescribes jail time for motorists who kill pedestrians, even if they aren't speeding and the victim crosses improperly.

Victor Guzman, a 55-year-old Havana resident, said that if authorities are serious about discouraging jaywalking, they need to fix the streets and sidewalks, improve signage and paint more lanes and crosswalks.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

People walk across the street in Havana, Cuba, recently. Jaywalking is endemic in Havana, where islanders seem to treat the streets like a real-life version of the video game Frogger, weaving in and out of traffic while risking life and limb to reach the other side.

■ Caffeine shot in nectar for bee memory, not buzz

By Malcolm Ritter
AP science writer

NEW YORK – Talk about a caffeine buzz: A new study says honeybees get a shot of caffeine from certain flowers, and it perks up their memory.

That spurs them to return to the same type of plant, boosting its prospects for pollination and the future of the plant species.

Maybe it shouldn't be a surprise that one of the flowers is the coffee plant. Its nectar offers about as much caffeine concentration as a cup of instant coffee, according to researchers.

But some citrus plants serve caffeine too, albeit in lower concentrations. It's found in the nectar of orange and grapefruit blossoms.

The caffeine helps a bee remember that the flower's scent promises a tasty payoff, the researchers said. So the bee will seek out those flowers, transferring their pollen.

How could researchers tell the caffeine boosts a bee's memory? In an experiment that used lab tools instead of flowers, they trained individual bees to expect a sugary drink when they smelled a certain floral scent. Some bees got nectar-like concentrations of caffeine in their drink; others didn't.

Then after a day or more, they exposed the insects to the same scent and watched to see if they extended their feeding tubes in response, a sign they were ready to sip. After 24 hours, the bees that had gotten caffeine were three times as likely to remember as bees that hadn't. After 72 hours, they were twice as likely.

Today in history

The Associated Press

Today is Saturday, March 9, the 68th day of 2013. There are 297 days left in the year. A reminder: Daylight-saving time begins Sunday at 2 a.m. Clocks go forward one hour.

Today's highlight in history:

On March 9, 1963, two Los Angeles police officers, Ian Campbell and Karl Hettinger, were disarmed and abducted by ex-convicts Gregory Powell and Jimmy Lee Smith during a traffic stop in Hollywood; the officers were taken to an onion field near Bakersfield, Calif., where Campbell was shot to death while Hettinger managed to escape. (Powell and Smith were sent to prison; the case was detailed in the book "The Onion Field" by Joseph Wambaugh.)

On this date:

In 1916, Mexican raiders led by Pancho Villa attacked Columbus, N.M., killing 18 Americans.

In 1954, CBS newsman Edward R. Murrow critically reviewed Wisconsin Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy's anti-communism campaign on "See It Now."

In 1997, gangsta rapper The Notorious B.I.G., whose real name was Christopher Wallace, was killed in a still-unsolved drive-by shooting in Los Angeles; he was 24.

Ten years ago: The film musical "Chicago" tap-danced away with a haul of movie honors at the Screen Actors Guild Awards, including best ensemble cast and the lead-actress prize for star Renee Zellweger.

Five years ago: Spain's governing Socialists won a second term, but without a majority in parliament.

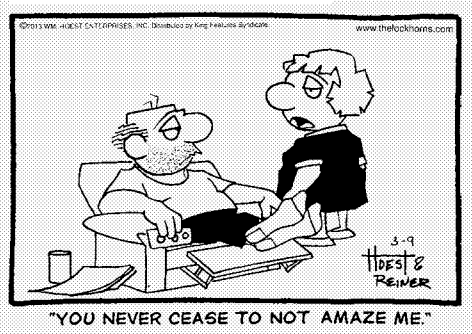

One year ago: A high-profile international mission to end the Syrian crisis stumbled before it began as the opposition rejected calls by U.N. envoy Kofi Annan for dialogue with President Bashar Assad as pointless and out of touch after a year of violence. Lindsey Vonn of the United States won the World Cup giant slalom race in Are, Sweden to clinch her fourth overall title.

THINK ABOUT IT

"Conscience is the perfect interpreter of life."

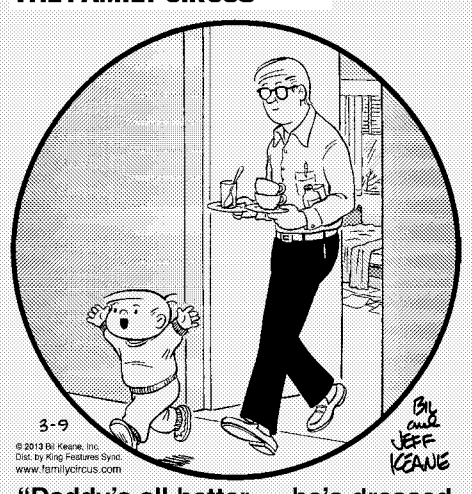

— Karl Barth, Swis theologian (1886-1966).

THE LOCKHORNS

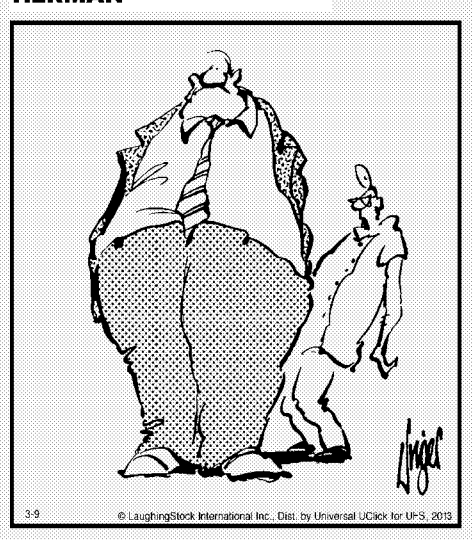

"YOU NEVER CEASE TO NOT AMAZE ME."

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

"Daddy's all better — he's dressed in REAL CLOTHES!"

HERMAN

"No wonder you're having difficulty walking. You've got an armchair back here!"

Finch and Reese (Michael Emerson, Jim Caviezel) have their work cut out for them when the Machine hands them a strange case: a person who is apparently leading two lives but hasn't left a digital footprint in either one. Brett Cullen ("The Gates") and Rhys Coiro ("A Gifted Man") guest star in "Identity Crisis."

Movie: Restless Virgins

Inspired by a true story, this new docudrama uncovers a world where privileged teens run wild at a New England prep school. When Emily (Vanessa Marano, "Switched at Birth"), a scholarship student and editor of the school newspaper, discovers five members of the lacrosse team made a sex tape with a classmate, she blows the lid off the controversy by releasing the tape virally. The scandal led the school, Boston's Milton Academy, to expel multiple students.

Restaurant Stakeout

Dawn, the owner of the Liberty Bar and Grill in Hoboken, N.J., calls on Willie Degel for help in this episode.

She's been in business for 14 years, but the restaurant is on shaky ground now, and she doesn't know why. He soon discovers the reason: Dawn's hands-off management style has led to some serious issues in the ranks. He needs to convince her that she needs to assume more of a leadership role in "Act Like the Boss."

Movie: My Week With Marilyn

Michelle Williams gives an accomplished portrayal of Marilyn Monroe — which earned her a Golden Globe Award and an Oscar nomination — in this Simon Curtis-directed tale of screen icon Monroe during the filming of the 1957 movie "The Prince and the Showgirl." A production assistant (Eddie Redmayne as Colin Clark, whose memoir inspired this film) gets quite a different view of the actress away from the cameras. Kenneth Branagh plays Sir Laurence Olivier.

College Basketball

One of college basketball's fiercest rivalries gets another chapter tonight at Dean E. Smith Center in Chapel Hill as the Duke Blue Devils visit the North Carolina Tar Heels. Seth Curry and Mason Plumlee have Mike Krzyzewski's Blue Devils in the hunt for a high seed in the NCAA Tournament. North Carolina standouts James Michael McAdoo and Reggie Bullock hope to overcome a disappointing season and spoil their rivals' spot in the bracket.

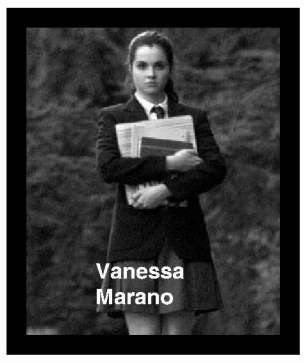

8 p.m. on AP
Pit Boss

Ashley hits the ground running in her new job at the Sid Levine Talent Agency, signing its first little person as a client. Back at Shortywood, Ron and Sebastian struggle to fill Ashley's shoes at the office and the kennel as well as on rescues. They find themselves stretched even thinner when Shorty leaves for a family event in the aptly named new episode "Barely Staying Afloat."

Movie: Chicago

Six Oscars, including best picture, went to director Rob Marshall's high-energy 2002 screen adaptation of John Kander and Fred Ebb's cynical stage musical about a Jazz Age murderess (Renee Zellweger). Catherine Zeta-Jones won an Academy Award for best supporting actress as a spouse-slaying chanteuse.

Movie: How to Lose a Guy

in 10 Days

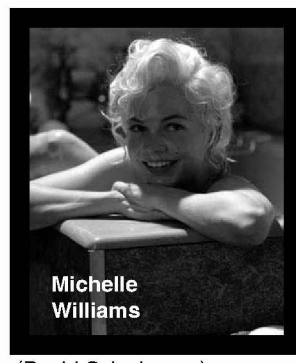

A Doris Day-type romantic comedy, this light but entertaining 2003 movie casts Kate Hudson as a magazine reporter doing a story on luring — then getting dumped by — a beau in 10 days. She attracts an advertising executive (Matthew McConaughey) who has just bet he can woo a woman into falling in love with him within the same time frame. Bebe Neuwirth, Robert Klein and Kathryn Hahn ("Crossing Jordan") co-star.

Friends

The comedy's 200th episode, "The One With the Male Nanny," includes a rare TV appearance by movie star Freddie Prinze Jr., as the person hired by Rachel (Jennifer Aniston) to care for baby Emma. Ross (David Schwimmer) can barely conceal his jealousy. Phoebe (Lisa Kudrow) is caught between two suitors (guest stars Paul Rudd and Hank Azaria), and Chandler (Matthew Perry) resents Monica's (Courteney Cox Arquette) anecdotes about a funny co-worker.

Movie: Love Takes Wing

Fans of "Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman" probably will like this family-friendly period piece based on Janette Oke's popular book series. A widowed doctor (Sarah Jones) tries to help residents of a frontier town where a mysterious illness has claimed several lives, driving up local fears that an orphanage is responsible for the outbreak.

AUCTION BOUND

Our policy is to keep our pre-owned inventory here no longer than 45 days (what we refer to in the industry as "fresh"). After 45 days, we tag the vehicle for transport to auction.

FAQs:

Is there anything wrong with the vehicle?
Please understand that before any vehicle is placed on our lot it is thoroughly inspected and reconditioned.
*(excludes vehicles marked "as is")

Why didn't the vehicle sell earlier?
Several scenarios may come into play – we may have several of the same make/model/ and color on our lot at the same time. Also, quite frankly, as much as we advertise, sometimes a person may not think to look here for a pre-owned Jeep or Mustang, etc.

What's the catch?
Nothing, our "fresh lot" policy is your gain. So, take a look at our "Auction Bound" inventory. You may find your next great vehicle here!
